THE LATEST.

Again the Committee on Finance was upheld when the Senate voted down an amendment by Senator Cummins to lower the duty on round iron, etc., by a vote of 35 to 42. Almost the entire session was given up to a debate on the profits of the United States Steel Corporation and toward the end of the day personalities were freely indulged in by Senators. This occurred after Senator Root had spoken in defense of the Finance Committee and in criticism of Senators who had complained of the failure of that committee to provide more ample information concerning various schedules.

At a meeting of the postal strikers in France a resolution was adopted asking aid from the workmen's unions and even intimating a willingness to join hands with the revolutionary General Federation of Labor. Leaders of several unions promised that a general strike would be declared. In some of the provinces postal employes are going back to work and the strikers lost ground during the day.

Caldwell was wounded in the leg when arrested. His wife recently sued him for divorce.

MISSIONS HAVE A FIELD DAY

At Three Sessions of Southern Baptist Convention.

Foreign Board's Report Discussed From Every Angle.

Volunteers Who Will Send Missionaries Abroad.

MONEY FOR SEMINARY TO-DAY

From every conceivable angle foreign missions were boosted at the three sessions of the fifty-fourth annual Southern Baptist convention, which is being held at the armory. It was a day devoted entirely to the missionary work in foreign fields, outside of the hearing of a report of the Home Mission Board and the report of the Sunday-school Board. Speaker after speaker took the floor to lend encouragement to the furthering of evangelization in foreign fields.

Probably twenty-five men in all attacked the mission problem from all sides. Such a baptismal of the missionary idea has never been witnessed in Louisville. Returned workers talked upon their experiences in the field. Laymen who have visited the battleground of the missionaries and fired with the zeal of the labor urged and exhorted the 1,500 delegates and the 3,000 visitors upon the necessity and the value of foreign missions.

Converted To Spirit of Missions.

After the storm of words and the flow of ideas, it is hard to believe that anyone could have entered the convention hall in the morning and left it at night who was not thoroughly converted to the spirit and the idea of foreign missions. The subject was driven home with sledge-hammer blows of oratory. The appeal was direct. It was forcible. That it carried its point and won its fight would be hard to deny.

* * *

Dozen Volunteer As Missionaries.

It was not entirely necessary to await the effect of the foreign mission talk in time to come. There were tangible evidences of its immediate hold upon the audience. When volunteers, who would surrender their lives for devotion to the benighted and the heathen, were called for, a round dozen hands were raised and the pledge of undying fidelity to the mission cause was delivered to them then and there. When support for the missions was asked, it came spontaneously and rushingly. One man held up his hand as a pledge of supporting a missionary at $900 a year in a foreign land. More than ten signified their intention of giving up $100 a year toward the support of native missionaries. An appeal of such weight and moment for the foreign missionary work as was witnessed yesterday will, in the opinion of the leaders of the convention, give it an impetus like it has never had before.

* * *

Missions Almost Always Discussed.

The mission battle began with the finishing of the devotional exercises in the morning. It ended at 10 o'clock last night with the ringing speech of R. E. Chambers, a missionary to Southern China. The only time it was not under discussion was during the reading of the Sunday-school Board report and the report of the Home Mission Board. Even in these two reports the foreign mission field was alluded to in no uncertain terms, looking toward its advancement and betterment along all its various ramifications.

Big Fund For Seminary.

While last night's session wound up the general discussion of the foreign mission field, the sentiment and the interest fostered will, no doubt, bring it again before the convention before its final session. However, it will hardly be to-day. The three sessions scheduled promise to be full of the best things that will mark the entire convention. This morning it is expected to gather together the largest single fund for any one purpose ever raised on the convention floor. Thousands of dollars seem certain to be pledged to the further endowment of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, of this city, which this year celebrates its fiftieth anniversary.

* * *

Students To March.

The entire programme of the morning will be devoted to the seminary. The platform will be filled with the 320 students of the institution, who will march to the Armory this morning along with the trustees of the institution. The parade begins at 8:30 o'clock. Eminent speakers have been selected to deliver addresses on the seminary.

The afternoon session will deal with home missions. At 4 o'clock the convention will adjourn. The delegates will be transported to Cave Hill cemetery, where there will be services attending the unveiling of a monument to Dr. T. T. Eaton. The night session will be devoted to a further discussion of home missions, and the beginning of the talks relative to the work and labors of the Sunday-school Board.

More Than $400,000 Subscribed.

The report of the foreign mission board yesterday showed an increasing number of converts in foreign lands. It developed the fact that more than $400,000 was subscribed for the foreign movement. The two things decried by the report and emphasized by the speakers who amplified it, was that more than 10,000 churches contributed nothing to the foreign fund. Another complaint, which is not new, and which the convention is trying to remedy, is the lateness in the year that the money subscribed to the missions reaches the mission board. In spite of these faults the mission field was shown by the report to be in a better condition than ever before.

* * *

Money For Home Missions.

The report of the home mission field was also highly encouraging, but complained of the same shortage of money and the same dilatory habit of its subscription. It laid before the convention the increasing number of converts brought into the fold each year in this country and the great areas yet to be evangelized.

* * *

Sunday-Schools' Fine Condition.

The most striking thing in the report of the Sunday-school board was the highly prosperous condition of its finances. It collected money last year far in advance of any previous twelvemonth. Great enthusiasm was created when Mr. Frost, the secretary of this board, read the section of the report which promised one dollar for every two dollars subscribed for the permanent endowment of a chair of pedagogy at the seminary, up to an aggregate of $60,000.

* * *

Committee Chooses Baltimore.

As far as the committee on time, place and preacher is concerned, Baltimore has won the 1910 convention. The committee made a motion last night to have its report a special order of business for 10 o'clock, but was ruled out of order by President Josua Levering. The report will now in all probability have to be held up until it can be slipped in to-day. St. Joseph will not let the fight for the next convention end with the report of the committee. It will make an effort to break the report on the floor when it is reported.

There was no abatement yesterday of the first flush of enthusiasm which was so evident on the opening night. The attendance yesterday evening was up to the entire seating capacity of the part of the armory being used as a convention hall. The two day sessions drew large crowds. The increasing heat began to tell on many of the delegates last night. Those who had been in constant attendance at all three of the strenuous sessions quickly accepted the motion to adjourn when 10 o'clock rolled around.

Those who have attended the convention for years say that yesterday, from every point of view, was eminently successful. They declared they had never witnessed a harder fought or more successful campaign for foreign missions. The three sessions promise to go down in Baptist history as foreign missions day.

The Rev. John E. Briggs, of Atlanta, Ga., conducted the devotional services. As on the opening night, the 200 voices on the platform sang the hymns with fervor and feeling. The services lasted thirty minutes and were impressive.

Ten minutes were devoted to the quotation of scriptural passages by the delegates rising in all parts of the audience.

Dr. G. J. Porter, field secretary Foreign Board, took up the discussion of foreign missions as the first speaker of the evening, where it left off in the afternoon. "There was a debt this year of $20,000 in the foreign mission fund," Dr. Porter began. "If the 10,000 churches which contributed nothing had sent $3 each we would be out of debt. A great missionary crusade among Southern Baptists is needed and I think is coming. What we should do is to bring up the reserve forces and begin to do business in a big way for the Lord.

"The greatest sin against the Saviour to-day is the tendency to make Him a neighborhood God."

Dr. T. S. Potts, member of the committee on time, place and preachers, moved to make the report of his committee a special order of business for 10 o'clock. President Levering ruled the motion out of order. Dr. Potts held a short conversation with the president, after which nothing more was heard of the motion for the time being.

* * *

The Hon. E. W. Stevens Speaks.

The Hon. E. W. Stevens, of Missouri, who read one of the reports in the afternoon, spoke, as a layman, on foreign missions last night. He had just returned from a voluntary trip around the world, on which he visited most of the foreign missionary fields. He was on fire for the work.

"I saw the missionary fields to find out whether it was a matter of sentiment," said Mr. Stevens. "I wanted to see if the people you have sent away are practical, and if they obtain results. The great problem of the day is missions. If we want to solve the destiny of mankind and bring about international peace the best method is through the gentle use of missions.

"Representatives of the Prince of Peace preceded the battleship fleet around the world, and made its peaceful passage possible. There are no fakes; no frauds in the missionary work. The workers are practical to a high degree. The missionaries I met were happy, bright, promising and attractive. I never saw a missionary who wanted to lay down his arms and give up the fight.

"The Sandwich Islanders one hundred years ago were cannibals. Now the islands are termed the 'Pearl of the Pacific.' The first cultured Japanese taken to Japan was taken there by missionaries.

* * *

Opportunity In China.

"There is a great opportunity in China. Here is a Chinese trowel. It was given to me by a Chinese preacher, and with it I laid the cornerstone of a Baptist seminary in Shanghai. The way to reach the Chinese is through the Chinese.

"The four practical ways of doing mission work is educational, medical, preaching and house-to-house visitation. In Burmah the Baptists have a seminary. That is truely Baptist land."

Dr. Z. D. Cody, of Greenville, N. C., spoke on "Our Duty to Advance."

"If we adopt a policy of cutting the work to fit the income," Dr. Cody began, "then the work will decrease. Increasing work has increased the contributions. We have the finest system in the world for killing secretaries by causing them to give too much of their attention to collecting funds when all their interest should center in the work abroad.

"I urge the Southern Baptists not to enter into the programme which divides up the world among the denominations of the globe. Our share of the world would cost us millions a year to take care of. We have not the money for such a project; we cannot possibly enter into it. We must go ahead by gradual degrees and cannot afford to jump into this elaborate programme for the evangelization of the world by the various Christian denominations. I would not rush in where angels fear to tread.

Eyes Turned Toward America.

"There are 600,000,000 human beings opening their eyes and turning them to America. The educational work of missions is giving these people their hopes. There has come to our colleges a new spirit of life. The young desire to fit themselves to do a man's work. All these young people show interest in foreign mission work and many committed themselves to the foreign mission work.

"This state of affairs is a revolution in life. It is not ephemeral, you may be sure of that. This movement is increasing and where one drops out two come in. The young people are coming by the hundreds and saying, 'Send me.'

"The hour for advance has come. The grip of God has seized men. This is emphasized by the Layman's Movement."

* * *

Missionary From China.

T. C. Britton, missionary to North China, continued the train of foreign missionary work. His address was principally reminiscent and narrative of conditions and experiences as he found them.

"I want to tell you of one or two of those Chinese Christians," began Mr. Britton. "One night after the congregation was dismissed we again prayed, and it was then that I began to love the Chinese. A band of Chinese Christians called upon me as I was leaving and told me to take their thanks to the country which had done so much for them."

* * *

R. E. Chambers Talks.

R. E. Chambers, missionary to South China, delivered the last of the foreign mission talks. Mr. Chambers is the head of a publishing society in China, but talked mostly upon the missionary work done.

"Wonderful changes, political, social and religious, are taking place in China," said Mr. Chambers. The Government has changed. Americans are welcome, turbulence and strife is at an end there. Now is the golden opportunity for missionary work in China. The conditions are ideal and the time is ripe. The missionary field there is well-equipped for pushing on the Christian religion. Our Christian women are making educated, upright Christian Chinese women.

"The hospitals are doing much to spread Christianity. The medical mission-

IRE AROUSED BY ROOT'S LECTURE

Senators Tell Newcomer To Keep In Background.

New Yorker Criticises Demands For Information.

Money, La Follette and Cummins Reply.

WARM WORDS ARE EXCHANGED

Washington, May 14.—[Special.]—Senator Elihu Root, of New York, stepped into a senatorial hornets' nest this afternoon when he undertook to deliver a severe lecture to the Senate for not getting along faster with the tariff bill. Senator Gallinger had just completed a fulsome eulogy of Senator Aldrich, during which it was claimed that the Finance Committee chairman was deserving of fifty-seven varieties of medals for the good-natured way in which he had endured the "denunciation and vituperation" of the Senate.

So the Senate was in none the best of humor when Senator Root, well toward the end of the afternoon, gave his imitation of Mrs. Caudle. The distinguished New Yorker started off with a few subtle thrusts, aimed at Senators Lafolette, Dolliver, Cummins and other "progressives," as well as at Democrats who have been occupying time by insisting that the tariff measure shall be considered carefully and in the light of full information. But as Mr. Root proceeded he waxed warm and eloquent until he reached the point where he was delivering sledge-hammer blows that startled even the oldest Senators.

* * *

La Follette Comes Back.

No sooner had he resumed his seat before he was the target of Senator La Follette, who in warm and vigorous words resented the action of Senator Root in lecturing Senators who thought they were "attending to business." Then Senator Money, of Mississippi, took a fling at Senator Root, telling him that he was a new Senator doing less than most new Senators do, and that, much as present conditions in the Senate displeased Mr. Root, the latter had "not yet seen things."

"You just wait till this bill comes back from conference," said Mr. Money, shaking his finger in the face of Senator Root, "and you will see something to talk about. You haven't heard any talking at all, yet."

Senator Cummins next took a whack at Senator Root, not quite as vigorously as Senators Money and La Follette, but strong enough for his blows to be felt.

* * *

Gets "In Bad" Too.

Earlier in the day Senator Root, according to senatorial notions, got "in bad" in another way by attempting to disclaim the "irresponsibility of the Senate Finance Committee for those portions of the House bill which the committee did not amend. The "irresponsibility" argument of Senator Root excited considerable comment during the balance of the afternoon, and there was considerable surprise as to just why he should contend that the committee was "irresponsible" when the committee itself made no such claim. Senators Rayner, of Maryland, and La Follette, of Wisconsin, both combated the proposition, and Senator Rayner read from the opening speech of Senator Aldrich himself to show that when the bill was first reported to the Senate that the committee stood ready to explain and defend every paragraph of the measure.

The contention which Senator Root made was that the Senate Finance Committee was only called upon to explain those paragraphs which it had amended, and that it was not bound to furnish information respecting paragraphs which it had not changed. Senator Root has a keen mind, and it is doubtful whether any other member of the Senate would have made any such contention before it had been sprung by him. It was on a par with the "constructive recess" proposal which he made several years ago.

Quotes James J. Hill.

Asking that an interview with J. J. Hill be read to the Senate, immediately after that body convened to-day, Senator Scott indorsed its advice to Congress that oratory be suspended and that Congress promptly pass the tariff bill.

"This," said Mr. Scott, "is in line with letters I am daily receiving begging and praying that these gentlemen," waving his hand over the Senate chamber, "get through with their wind-jamming and let the country go ahead with its business."

Senator Beveridge spoke in support of an amendment offered by him relative to the internal revenue tax on tobacco and its products. Contending that the Government had lost $184,000,000 in the last eight years through the repeal of the war-time tax of 1898, Mr. Beveridge undertook by his amendment to increase the present rate of internal taxes on tobacco, snuff, cigarettes and cigars worth more than 10 cents.

Mr. Beveridge declared that the tobacco trust, which he said was the American Tobacco Company, had derived great benefit from the enormous loss of revenue which, he said, was due to the law repealing the increased rates of 1898. The law providing for the high rates of 1898 permitted the manufacturer to reduce the size of the packages in which the tobacco is sold to the people, according to Mr. Beveridge.

* * *

Short Weight Continues.

"In 1901 this increased tobacco tax was removed," he said, "but the short weight packages of tobacco were continued by the very law that removed the tax. The manufacturer still collects the war-time tax from the people, but instead of paying it to the Government he keeps it for himself."

Mr. Beveridge declared that his amendment would not affect the cigarmakers of the country, because, he said, it does not enhance the tax on any cigars except those which sell for ten cents or more. His amendment increases the present tax of six cents a pound on snuff to twelve cents a pound.

On smoking and chewing tobacco the rate is increased from six cents a pound to nine cents. On cigarettes the proposed rate is $1.50 a thousand on those selling at wholesale from $2 to $4 per thousand. On those selling from $4 to $8 per thousand the tax proposed is $3 per thousand and on cigarettes selling at over $8 a thousand, the tax is increased from $1.08 to $4.50 a thousand. On cigarettes selling under $2 a thousand the present tax is 54 cents a thousand and the war rate of $1.50 a thousand is restored.

A graduated scale is proposed for the tax on cigars. For those retailing at three for a quarter or ten cents straight, the amendment increases the tax from $3 to $4.50; upon those selling for from two for a quarter to fifteen cents straight it increases the tax from $3 to $6, and upon those retailing at twenty cents and more it increases the tax from $8 to $9 a thousand.

* * *

Trust the Beneficiary.

Claiming that his amendment would increase the revenues to the extent of more than $21,000,000, Mr. Beveridge asserted that the tobacco trust was reaping vast benefit through failure to enact such legislation as he proposed.

Mr. Beveridge controverted the idea that the continuation by law of the short-weight war-time package after the war tax had been removed did not affect the plug tobacco business.

"The law," he said, "does not fix the size of the cut that is sold, but the manufacturer of plug tobacco got the war tax on this article out of the people by selling a smaller cut, and this practice still continues. When a box of plug tobacco is sold by the trust to the retail dealer there is marked on each plug a place for the cut. By decreasing the size of these cuts very slightly the tobacco trust, through the retailer, gets the war-time price for a cut from a plug of tobacco."

Upon taking up the iron and steel sections of the tariff bill, Mr. Aldrich asked that the Senate pass over the paragraph relating to pig iron, as the Committee on Finance wished to consider an amendment affecting the duty on cast scrap iron.

La Follette Arouses Root.

Mr. La Follette complained that he had difficulty in obtaining from the Committee on Finance information to guide him in his course on the tariff bill, and the statement brought Senator Root to the defense of the committee.

The committee, said Mr. Root, in reporting a House bill was under no obligation to furnish information to the Senate except on those paragraphs on which it proposed amendments.

Mr. McLaurin declared that in reporting the measure the Finance Committee had stamped the entire bill with its approval, and as forcibly in respect to amended sections as in respect to sections reported without amendment.

Mr. La Follette and Mr. Rayner upheld this view.

Mr. Gallinger characterized as a great fallacy the charge that the effect of the protective tariff was to add to the domestic price the duty levied on the goods.

Referring to a criticism by Mr. La Follette, Mr. Root said Senators would do well to confine themselves to clear-cut, short statements, and "to refrain from declamation and from general discussion for home consumption."

TWO KILLED DURING MOUNTAIN SHOOTFEST

TROUBLE STARTS AT SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

MERCHANT SHOT IN ABDOMEN; SERIOUSLY WOUNDED.

DEAD MEN WELL CONNECTED.

Big Stone Gap, Va., May 14.—[Special.]—A shooting affray took place last night at Dryden, a village in Lee county, in which two men were killed and one was wounded. The commencement exercises of the Dryden public school were being held in the second story of the school building and a card of admission was necessary to gain entrance.

William Jessee, a merchant, aged about [illegible] years, was doorkeeper, and R. M. [illegible], aged about 28 years, and William Bailey, aged about 25 years, started to enter. Mr. Jessee asked them for their cards, and they failing, or refusing to comply, he would not permit them to go inside. One of the men then began to curse Jessee, who struck him. Then pistols were drawn by Young and Bailey, eight shots being fired. The light was put out, and it is supposed that both Young and Bailey thought they were firing on Jessee, and instead were shooting at each other. Jessee, who was shot in the abdomen, is said to have had a pistol, but it was found to be loaded in every chamber, and it is not thought he fired.

When the shooting was over and the people gathered around, Young and Bailey were dead, both having been shot through the heart. Young was a son of the Hon. Harvey Young, who represented Lee county in the House of Delegates for two terms, and was employed by the Federal Government in the Internal Revenue service. Bailey was a telegraph operator and has only recently returned from the West. Young and Bailey were cousins. Jessee, it is thought, will recover.

ISSUES ADDRESS.

STATE TAX COMMISSION SENDS OUT LETTER.

Wants Citizens To Suggest Plans For Improving the Revenue Laws.

Frankfort, Ky., May 14.—[Special.]—Secretary W. B. O'Connell, of the State Tax Commission, to-day issued for Chairman James Breathitt and Advisory Chairman Thomas A. Combs an address to the citizens of Kentucky, requesting suggestions for the revision of the State's plan of raising revenue and how the revenue and taxation laws may be improved. The address reads as follows:

"To the Citizens of Kentucky: The Tax Commission and the Advisory Commission appointed by the Governor of Kentucky to make an investigation as to our revenue system and to obtain information as to the systems now used in other States, are desirous of doing this work thoroughly.

"We believe that our present system is not generally satisfactory, and in the minds of many of our most progressive citizens is not only unsatisfactory as to the revenue produced for the State, but is so adjusted as to, in some directions, be an actual hindrance to the development of Kentucky.

"We therefore are desirous of obtaining from the good citizens of our own State suggestions which may aid us in a wise revision of the plan of raising revenue, and respectfully invite suggestions as to how our revenue laws may be improved. We request that such be typewritten and sent at the earliest date possible to the secretary of the joint bodies, Mr. W. B. O'Connell, at Frankfort, Ky.

"We are also desirous as far as possible to give public hearings in different sections of the State, and, if invited to do so, will endeavor to arrange to have representatives of the Tax Commission and Advisory Commission attend at such time and place as may be mutually convenient.

"When not convenient for all members to attend, the chairman of each body will arrange to have one or more representatives of each present, to conduct the public hearings.

"Request is made that all formal suggestions be made in type-written copy in triplicate for the use of the two commissions. Oral statements before the representatives of the commission will be gladly heard also—suggestions to be heard in the following order:

"Agricultural, real estate (in cities), mining and lumber, manufacture, mercantile, financial, corporations, personalty, retail merchants of Kentucky, other interests, general discussion.

"JAMES BREATHITT,
"Chairman Tax Commission.
"THOMAS A. COMBS,
"Chairman Advisory Committee.
"W. B. O'CONNELL, Secretary.

FATHER THERE IN GIRL'S PLACE

Charles W. Caldwell Shot by Augustus Remy.

Arranged Tryst With Merchant's Daughter.

Wounded Man Pursued by Bloodhounds.

LAWYER'S ILLS PILE HIGH.

Columbus, Ind., May 14.—[Special.]—Charles W. Caldwell, the lawyer-schoolteacher who has been trying to oust Secretary of State Knox, is in a bad way, for he is in the county jail here with a thirty-eight caliber revolver bullet in his right thigh and charged with attempting to abduct 16-year-old Belah Remy, daughter of Augustus Remy, a merchant and member of the school board of Elizabethtown, six miles south of here, where he recently taught school and where Belah Remy was his pupil.

The bullet was fired with eight others by Augustus Remy, who had intercepted one of the letters written to his daughter by Caldwell and asking her to meet him in a grape arbor in the rear of her home last night. Remy was also at the trysting place, but when he fired the shots at Caldwell he did not know that he had hit him.

All-Night Pursuit.

Officers and bloodhounds followed Caldwell all last night, but did not catch him. This morning he was seen coolly standing in front of his law office here by Sheriff Cox, who, going to him, told him that officers and bloodhounds had searched for him all night. Caldwell yawned and indifferently replied: "Is that so? They must have had an exciting time."

Later Caldwell was arrested and on his way to the jail it was noticed that he limped badly, but as he denied knowing anything of the shooting it was presumed that he was sore from much running. When searched at the jail there was found on the person of Caldwell the complaint which he had written against Secretary of State Knox and also a number of letters from Miss Remy. Their correspondence was carried on by means of a code, which the girl explained to her father. In their correspondence the words "darling" and "angel child" occurred frequently.

* *

Girl Stands By Him.

That the girl loves her teacher is shown by the following remark she made when her father shot at him: "I wish it were you that was shot instead of Charlie."

The girl told her father that Remy told her he was not legally married to his present wife; that it was a sham marriage and he would marry her as soon as she was graduated. Belah, 14-year-old sister Helen is said to have helped in the love-making by carrying notes, etc., for them.

Remy filed two surety of the peace affidavits against Caldwell to-day in a magistrate's court, in the first of which he alleged he feared personal bodily harm from Caldwell, and in the second he alleged that he feared Caldwell would abduct his daughters, Belah and Helen.

Trial To-day.

The defendant pleaded not guilty to the charges and his trial was set for to-morrow. A diamond ring and a diamond necklace which had been given to the girl by Caldwell were turned over to Sheriff Cox to-day by the girl's father. The girl said that Caldwell began making love to her while she was his pupil, and that she had learned to love him very dearly and would have eloped with him had not their plans been frustrated. Caldwell, who is 40 years of age, is a son of the Judge of the Circuit Court of Coles county, Ill.

REMY LIES IN WAIT.

Greets Caldwell With Volley of Eight Shots.

Elizabethtown, Ind., May 14.—Augustus M. Remy, a merchant of this place, fired eight shots at close range at a man supposed to be Charles W. Caldwell at 8 o'clock last night, but none of them took effect. Remy says he got a "tip" yesterday that Caldwell, who is 40 years old and married, was making secret visits to his 16-year-old daughter, Belah, and, arming himself with a Winchester, a shotgun and two revolvers, he lay in wait for the man who soon appeared through the orchard at the rear of the Remy home.

Great excitement prevailed and a manhunting expedition was organized. Sheriff Cox and Deputy Sheriff Smith were called from Columbus, and Seymour and North Vernon were notified to look out for Caldwell. Bloodhounds were started from Franklin on an interurban car and brought from Columbus in an automobile. The dogs took the trail eagerly, and led a circuitous route through fields, woods, barnyards and over a large scope of country west of Elizabethtown. Fresh tracks were frequently scented, as the occasional yelping of the dogs indicated along the trail. About 3 o'clock this morning a man was seen running only a short distance ahead of the hounds by Deputy Sheriff Cross, but he disappeared in the darkness, and the last that was found of the trail was a mile east of Azalia, about 6 a. m.

Mr. Remy says that on Wednesday night he saw a man in his dooryard, who advanced threateningly toward him, and this man, he says, afterward proved to be Caldwell, Thursday night, Remy says, Caldwell attempted to see Belah Remy, and the chase followed.

The Girl's Statement.

The Remy girl was closely questioned by Sheriff Cox and others last night. She admitted being in love with Caldwell and told a straight story of Caldwell's attentions. She said he sent her clandestine notes and gifts and had visited her since last March. She was firm in her denial, however, of any wrongdoing, and said that he was just so good to her she could not help loving him. She showed a diamond ring, several pieces of jewelry, books, music and other gifts made to her by Caldwell.

The young girl is bright and has always borne a good reputation. Her mother has been dead since she was a babe, and Mr. Remy has a second wife. The girl says she was aided in seeing Caldwell by a younger sister, Helen, and a friend, Myrtle Pottorff, who were in sympathy with the love affair and helped in arranging the visits.

Caldwell was married to Viola Walker, a refined, cultured young woman, of Rising Sun, in 1907. They came to Elizabethtown two years ago, where Caldwell was a high school teacher. He practiced law in Illinois for two years and was recently admitted to the bar in Columbus.

Caldwell is a member of a well-known family, his father being Judge of the Circuit Court in Coles county, Illinois. Jack Caldwell, a brother, is a traveling salesman for Swift & Co., and another brother, Burt Caldwell, is superintendent of a Government hospital in Panama.

SHORT $13,000 FOR BEREA COLLEGE BRANCH.

The Rev. A. E. Thompson Wants Lexington To Raise Its Subscription.

Lexington, Ky., May 14.—[Special.]—The Rev. A. E. Thompson, of Berea, arrived here this afternoon to try to secure from citizens of Lexington a larger contribution to the proposed negro industrial branch of Berea College. Dr. Thomson states that the canvassing committee is yet about $13,000 short of the amount needed to be contributed by people of Kentucky to secure the big contributions of Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Russell Sage and others. Lexington has thus far subscribed a little over $2,000 in sums of from $500 to $1.

DEATH FOLLOWS IN WAKE OF TORNADOES

MISSOURI AND KANSAS SWEPT BY FIERCE STORMS.

FIVE KILLED AND MANY ARE SERIOUSLY INJURED.

WHOLE FAMILY IS MISSING.

Kansas City, Mo., May 14.—A series of tornadoes in Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma late to-day killed at least five, injured fifty-five, devastated one town, wrecked a train and did great damage to property.

Twenty-five were injured by a storm that swept over Mount Washington and Fairmount Park, suburbs of Kansas City. At least two of these are thought to be fatally injured, and others seriously.

The town of Hollis, Kas., near Concordia was swept away. Here three were killed and ten seriously injured. The dead:

FRED JEARDOE.
JOHN CYRE.
GEORGE ECKERT.

The Eckstrom family consisting of five persons, is missing. Their house is in ruins and it is thought they are dead.

Near Great Bend a tornado killed two and injured twenty. All wires are down in that vicinity and it is feared the death list may be greater.

William Ackerly, a Santa Fe engineer, was killed while working with a bridge gang between Great Bend and Kinsley. Frank Nicholson, a conductor, was also killed.

The tornado wrecked the work train of which Ackerly was engineer and blew it into a ditch.

Several members of the crew were blown 100 feet. The pile driver toppled over crushing Ackerly to death in his cab, when he remained with his hand upon the throttle.

Following are those injured in the Great Bend storm:

Lester Preston, Ransom Middaugh, Porter Thomas, R. E. Rucker, R. M. Brown, T. E. Fulkerson, Clarence Avery, Brakeman Murray and twelve unidentified.

Most of the victims in this case were members of the Santa Fe bridge crew in the train wrecked by the wind. The storm spread over a wide area, however. Said waste in many farm houses and injured many whose names could not be obtained to-night.

Many conflicting reports have been received. One had ten killed.

At Hoisington, Kan., a tornado injured a number and greatly damaged farm property. It was not so severe, however, as that passing over other portions of the State.

At Pond Creek, Okla., a wind-storm slightly injured [illegible] and leveled several houses.

A blinding rain and hail storm accompanied the wind in all three States. Many washouts demoralized railroad traffic. The Missouri Pacific main line was washed out near Walcott, between Leavenworth and Kansas City. The Burlington and Santa Fe were forced to annul some trains. Electrical disturbances crippled telegraph and telephone wires. On this account only meager reports from the storm-swept area could be obtained.

Twenty-five persons were injured, many seriously, and much property damaged in the tornado which struck Mount Washington and Fairmount Park, suburbs of Kansas City late to-day. It is believed five of the injured will die. Among the most seriously hurt are:

Mrs. James O'Gara, her father, mother and 5-year-old boy; Mrs. Mary Robinson and baby girl. Mrs. George Root and two James O'Gann, Mrs. R. J. Jenkins and 5-year-old son William.

HEARD FUNERAL ON HIS DEATHBED

AGED INDIANAN SUMMONS MINISTER FOR LAST RITES BEFORE HE PASSED AWAY.

Gas City, Ind., May 14.—On his death bed Elias B. Burns, 88 years old, to-day heard his funeral sermon preached. After having been advised by his physician that he could live only a few hours more, Mr. Burns summoned his minister, the Rev. Henry Schwan, and forty of his friends and neighbors and asked them to give him the satisfaction of attending his funeral service in his bedroom. Hymns were sung and Mr. Schwan preached a sermon after reading the eighth chapter of Romans. After the service the sick man seemed to linger, but later he relapsed into delirium.

DIVORCE GRANTED

C. A. CALDWELL FROM WIFE OF ONLY A FEW DAYS.

Marriage That Brought Sensational Features Through Metropolitan Press.

Eminence, Ky., May 14.—[Special.]—Judgment has been entered in the Henry Circuit Court by Judge Charles C. Marshall granting Charles A. Caldwell, an Eminence merchant, an absolute divorce from Mrs. Jane Parks Caldwell, and each party is restored to all property rights existing before the marriage. Unexpectedly, when the suit was called for hearing, there was no defense interposed by Mrs. Caldwell, and the judgment of divorce followed as a matter of right.

The Caldwell marriage last December and the sudden separation that followed five days afterward attracted no little attention in the metropolitan press of the country because of Jane Parks Caldwell's appearance in New York City with a self-styled "intellectual" affinity and the interviews she gave out concerning "trial marriages," one of which she claimed was her own with Mr. Caldwell.

That the divorce suit would be bitterly contested was expected up to the day of trial, as it was known here that former Lieut. Gov. W. P. Thorne, who is Mrs. Caldwell's attorney, had prepared an answer for the defense that sparkled with sensational allegations.

It is understood here that, through the compromise out of court, Mrs. Caldwell's attorney realized a substantial sum for her. The suit brought by Mr. Caldwell, alleging that Mrs. Caldwell, when she suddenly left him, took with her jewelry and diamonds, and the attachment suit against the bank, seeking to subject Mrs. Caldwell's money for the jewelry she is alleged to have taken, have all been dismissed, bringing a swift end to the Caldwell affair.

AMID SONGS AND TEARS OF JOY

Convention of Woman's Missionary Union Closes.

But Few Changes In Corps of Officers.

Slight Alteration In the Constitution.

SOME RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

Amid singing the praises of the lowly and the meek one of Galilee, the shedding of tears of joy and the exchange of farewells, so far as the routine work of the convention was concerned the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Southern Baptist convention, came to a close at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The closing scenes of the meeting were impressive in the extreme. Just before the election of officers began Mrs. E. G. Willingham of Atlanta, Ga., moved that Mrs. J. L. Burnham, of Kansas City, Mo., be requested to offer a prayer for the mothers and members of the union who were unable to be in attendance. Miss Fanny Heck, president of the body, declared that a motion was not necessary and at once asked that Mrs. Burnham lead in prayer, which she did in the most solemn manner.

The election of officers was the last order of the convention. The custom of the union is to re-elect all officers so long as they are living and willing to serve in the cause and in the work. This custom was followed out with but few exceptions yesterday. There were only two changes in the list of vice-presidents from the different States. Mrs. J. H. Wilson Marriott, who has served as vice president from the District of Columbia for a number of years, said that she could no longer serve and asked that some one be elected to succeed her. Mrs. George E. Truett was elected in her place. Mrs. W. E. Dicken, of Oklahoma City, Okla., was elected vice president of Oklahoma to succeed Mrs. T. C. Carleton.

Change In Constitution.

The recommendations of the Foreign Mission Board were adopted without change. Several minor changes were made in the recommendations of the executive committee before they were adopted. The most of the day was devoted to hearing of reports of the standing committees which all contained recommendations for the good of the union. A slight change was made in the constitution or by laws, that is that the fiscal end of the union shall be April 30 instead of April 15. This change was made in order to have the fiscal year the same as that of the Home and Foreign Mission boards.

Morning Session.

The First Presbyterian church at Fourth avenue and York street was crowded when the Woman's Missionary Union was called to order shortly before 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. W. J. Neel, of Georgia. She made a splendid appeal to the delegates and visitors to stand true to the teachings of the Saviour and always be ready to make sacrifices for His sake.

The first order of business was the consideration of the recommendations of the Foreign Mission Board. Considerable discussion arose among the delegates as to the recommendations that the Sunbeam Bands raise $8,500 to pay the salaries of the missionaries in Africa. Owing to the fact that this recommendation was a new departure some of the delegates were a little dubious about taking on such obligations but the recommendations were finally unanimously adopted. The recommendations in full are as follows:

* * *

Recommendations of Foreign Mission Board.

"We appreciate most heartily the efforts our sisters of the W. M. U. are putting forth for the advancement of the Master's Kingdom. The receipts of the past year have been good and our sisters have done a great work in giving out information and begetting new interest on the part of our people.

"First—We recommend that the sisters continue to lay special emphasis upon systematic and proportionate giving. We hope that they will so instill this idea in the hearts of our people that our churches will become impressed, and that our people will contribute more scripturally for the work of sending the gospel to all the world.

"Second—We recommend that the Young Woman's Auxiliary raise $8,500 to pay for the beautiful property which the board has bought at Shimonoseki, Japan.

"Third—We recommend that the Sunbeam Bands raise $8,500 to pay the salaries of our missionaries in Africa.

"Fourth—We recommend that the sisters continue to help in our editorial and educational departments. We find that our people are to a great extent uninformed about our work, and it is for this reason that they are not giving more. We believe that if we can get them to read the literature which has been and is being prepared on the work of the Kingdom, we will see a marked advance in their giving.

"Fifth—We recommend that the Christmas offering for this year shall again be taken for the great work in China. God has marvelously opened the doors of that great nation, and now is the opportunity to enter. The debased and degraded condition of women in that country should appeal to every woman and girl in our land who knows of Christ, to help the women and girls of China.

"Sixth—We recommend that the Woman's Missionary Union try to raise this year $115,000. This will be an advance over what our sisters raised for the past year, and we ask them to join with us in a strong forward movement.

Executive Committee's Recommendations Adopted.

The recommendations of the executive committee were read and discussed. It was decided that there was no objection to the recommendations, but that some changes in the wording of several of the paragraphs be made. The recommendations as amended and adopted are as follows:

With glad recognition of God's power and leadership in our work for the year, and the desire that the union may be more used of Him in the future, we submit the following recommendations:

1. Motto: "The people that know their God shall be strong and do exploits." Dan. xi., 32.

2 Young Woman's Auxiliary.—That we develop and extend the organization of the Y. W. A., that we continue to enlist other young women for mission service, emphasizing among them mission study courses, systematic and proportionate giving and special training for mission work; and that wherever it is deemed wise the Y. W. A. raise the State's apportionment for the current expenses of the training school.

3. Children's Societies.—That the special objects given the children in the past years by the home and foreign boards be continued; that systematic efforts be made to establish chapters of the order of Royal Ambassadors and Sunbeam Bands, and to enlist the boys as well as the girls in mission bands; that the children also be helped to form the habit of giving regularly and proportionately. We recommend further that wherever it is deemed wise the bands be given the State apportionment for the Margaret Home.

4. eBoxes.—That the box work so long a part of union's endeavor be continued.

5. Margaret Home.—That the plan of apportioning running expenses of the Home among the States; of sending these funds to the Treasurer, W. M. U., and of setting aside any surplus as part of a contingency fund remain unchanged.

6. W. M. U. Training School.—That, grateful for the success of the training school, we apportion among the States $3,000 for its current expenses for the year 1909-1910; and continue the effort to complete the sum of $20,000, the first third of an ultimate sum of $60,000 for permanent endowment.

7. Calendar.—That we instruct the W. M. U. Literature Department to prepare a missionary calendar for the ensuing year, assuring them that we will endeavor to place $6,000 in the hands of our societies. We recommend that the price per copy be 15 cents, postpaid.

8. Our Mission Fields—The Our Mission Fields, the official publication of the W. M. U., be circulated more widely; and that the societies be urged to further increase its subscription list among pastors, B. Y. P. U.'s and other mission workers.

9. Week of Prayer.—That the Week of Prayer for World-wide Missions be the first week in January; the week of Special Prayer and Offering for Home Missions the first week in March; and that as usual we make our Christmas offering for China and our special offering for Home Missions in March. We recommend that the societies be urged to begin their preparations for the Christmas offering in November, and so leave as much time as possible between the two offerings.

10. Enlistment.—That not having as yet brought into active service one-fifth of the women and children in our churches, we continue the campaign of enlistment and enlargement; that Enlistment month be observed in October, the States being asked to report the result of this special effort.

11. Apportionments.—That the apportionments to States for the coming year be based upon the amounts reported by them for the year just closed.

12. Secretary's Visits.—That the State leaders when arranging tours for the corresponding secretary, plan to give them the form of missionary institutes when possible; and that care be taken to make her visits as useful as may be by gathering the women from several churches at various central points.

13. Study, Service, Giving.—That we use the mission study courses and missionary institutes as means of better information; that we hold up before all our societies the need for personal service in our own needy communities, as expressing the spirit of the Master; and that a renewed effort be made to bring all our societies into line with systematic and proportionate giving. To this end we suggest that the State executive boards lay careful plans, adapted to their own work, for bringing to every member the value and the privilege of setting aside definitely for God's work not less than one-tenth of her income.

Nominating Committee.

The committee on nomination of officers was named as follows:

Alabama—Miss Lide.
Arkansas—Mrs. M. J. Thompson.
District of Columbia—Mrs. G. E. Truett.
Florida—Mrs. W. W. Weakley.
Georgia—Mrs. A. J. Orme.
Kentucky—Mrs. E. S. Broadus.
Maryland—Mrs. Joshua Levering.
Louisiana—Mrs. I. L. Love.
Mississippi—Miss N. Bankston.
Missouri—Mrs. C. C. Harvey.
North Carolina—Mrs. H. C. Moore.
Oklahoma—Miss Sue Howell.
South Carolina—Mrs. E. V. Baldy.
Tennessee—Mrs. A. U. Boone.
Texas—Mrs. F. S. Davis.
Virginia—Mrs. O. F. Gregory.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session was called to order at about 3 o'clock and the devotional exercises were led by Mrs. A. J. Wheeler, of Alabama. The business of the afternoon was rushed to a great extent, on account of some of the committees scheduled for reporting in the morning were unable to report. Mrs. A. J. Orme read the report of the committee on Sunbeam Work. This is a new society and during the first year one hundred societies were organized. The report stated that it was covering a field not heretofore covered.

Mrs. O. F. Gregory, of Baltimore, Md., made the report on nominations for the boards of the training school in Louisville. The officers were re-elected.

Miss Heck announced that the collection made in the morning amounted to $3,197.60.

Mrs. W. C. Golden, chairman of the committee on apportionments, read a report concurring in the recommendations of the boards as to funds to be raised. She said there was an increase of 43 per cent. in the request for home mission purposes and an increase of 19 per cent. for foreign missions.

Miss Edith Crane of the board of managers of the incorporation made a report that all the property of the union was in good condition and was being admirably kept by those in charge.

The board of managers of the incorporation was re-elected unanimously. Mrs. T. N. Sherman read the report of the committee on literature which recommended that more free literature be distributed where it can do the most good.

Expressing Good Will.

Mrs. Joshua Levering, of Baltimore, was designated by the president to prepare a letter to the missionaries of the union expressing the good will of the union toward them.

Mrs. W. H. Matlack, chairman of the press committee, which is a new committee, made a very good report in which she told how much good had been done by the committee in getting the news of what the union was doing in the newspapers as well as in religious periodicals.

Short resolutions read by Miss J. L. Spalding, chairman of the committee on resolutions, thanking the people of Louisville for their hospitality and the members of the First Presbyterian church for the use of their building were adopted.

Mrs. P. S. Davis, of Texas, was called to the chair during the election of officers. Miss F. E. S. Heck was placed in nomination for re-election. There being no opposition, Miss Edith Crane was authorized to cast one ballot for Miss Heck. Mrs. J. B. Gambrell was named to escort Miss Heck to the chair. Miss Heck simply thanked the convention for the honor conferred on her so many times. Other officers were renominated, save two exceptions in the list of vice presidents.

A resolution thanking the press of the city was adopted.

REV. W. W. HAMILTON, D. D., Ga., re-elected president of the Baptist Young People's Union.

THE REV. J. M. FROST, Of Nashville, Tenn. superintendent of Southern Baptist Sunday-schools.

A FALLEN GODDESS.

[Bangkok Times.]

A goddess has fallen from grace. She is, or was, the deity of the Kun in a temple at Canton. Fire took place there not long ago, and the unfortunate goddess, being made of wood, was unable to save herself. The nam hoi magistrate, in his wisdom, has decreed that she shall be worshiped no more, as the fact of her being burned is proof of her inability to perform a miracle.

St. Paul Newspaper Sold.

St. Paul, Minn., May 14.—Webster Wheelock, editor and one of the principal owners of the Pioneer Press Company, to-day announced the sale of the Pioneer Press newspapers, afternoon and morning, the Twelfth-street building and its manufacturing plant to C. H. Grasty and others interested in the publishing of the St. Paul Dispatch.

Mr. Wheelock said that although the final transfer of the stock of the Pioneer Press Company had not been made, the preliminary negotiations to the end had been completed. The absorption of the Pioneer Press will undoubtedly mean the discontinuance of the Evening Pioneer Press, the afternoon edition of that paper.

Grand Jury Refuses To Indict.

Cincinnati, O., May 14.—The grand jury reported to-day that it had ignored the case of Mrs. Elizabeth Forsythe, a former newspaper writer of Indianapolis, who shot and killed Louis Plowman, a printer of Canton, O., two weeks ago. She claimed Plowman was peering through a window at her home here and that she became panic-stricken, opened the door and shot the man.

BAD LANGUAGE

Charged Against Capt. Julius Leschinger.

R. C. KASTNER, A BARBER, THE COMPLAINANT.

BOARD OF PUBLIC SAFETY WILL HAVE A HEARING.

POLICEMAN DENIES CHARGE.

Capt. Julius Luschinger, of the police department, recently promoted and placed in charge of the Fifth district, will have to answer before the Board of Public Safety at noon Friday, May 21, on charges of misconduct and conduct unbecoming an officer, preferred by R. C. Kastner, a barber at 1467 Shelby street.

In a letter addressed to the mayor and the Board of Public Safety, Mr. Kastner makes charges of language used which cannot be published in a newspaper. The letter is as follows:

Louisville, Ky., May 14, 1909.

"To the Mayor and the Honorable Board of Public Safety, Louisville, Ky.

"Gentlemen: As a taxpayer and citizen of Louisville and as a business man doing business in this city, I hereby submit to you the following charges of misconduct and conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, committed by Capt. Julius Luchsinger, captain of the Fifth District, committed in manner and form as follows, to-wit:

"First. That on Tuesday, May 11, 1909, at or about 11:30 o'clock p. m. I was at Shelby and Ormsby avenue, just opposite the car barn, when I was approached by Capt. Luchsinger and attacked by him on the public street and grossly abused and insulted by the said officer, who conducted himself toward me as follows:

"That said officer in a wanton and bulldozing manner grabbed hold of the undersigned and assaulted me and said: 'Say, you know what I am going to do to you if you don't quit balling me out?' I replied, 'I have not been balling you out or any one else.' Luschinger then said to me, 'The hell you ain't. I am going to beat — — — you and put you in the wagon.' I replied that I had done nothing to be arrested for, and Luschinger said, 'You — — — — I am going to knock your brains out and look you up. I am going to knock your — — brains out and put you in the wagon, you — — — — you.'

"I earnestly protested against such a wanton attack, and told him that an officer had less right to assault and insult an unoffending citizen than anyone else. I told the officer that if I did anything contrary to the law it would be his duty to arrest me, but that he had no right to assault me in this manner and that I would never submit to it. I said that I would not take it off any man, and Luschinger replied, 'Yes you will take it off me, you crossback — — — —. I called you one, and will call you one again.'

"Second. I desire to further state that the above attack was committed upon me without provocation; that at the time I was doing nothing to offend anyone; that I was perfectly orderly and sober, and on my way to my home in the neighborhood, and that the attack upon me and language used toward me was in a public place and in the presence of strangers and citizens known to me, thereby causing me the greatest shame and humiliation; that such arbitrary abuse of power and authority by an officer toward a citizen in a public place ought to be condemned by every fair-minded man, and I respectfully ask your board not to let such a flagrant offense go unpunished. Respectfully submitted,

"R. C. KASTNER."

Chairman Green, of the Board of Public Safety, said the board would make a thorough investigation of the charges. He said he did not know the facts in the case, but he had heard that Mr. Kastner had a controversy with Capt. Luschinger over the curtains in Mr. Kastner's barber shop being kept up on Sunday.

Capt. Luschinger denied using the offensive language, though he admitted having a controversy with the complainant. He said that they had a quarrel which had been of long standing.

GRAFT CHARGED

In Affairs of the Anti-Saloon League.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY JEROME TO INVESTIGATE.

BOGUS DEGREES USED BY PROHIBITION ADVOCATES.

ASK ACCOUNTING OF MONEY.

Detroit, Mich., May 14.—District Attorney Jerome, of New York, announces that he will take up the charges of embezzlement of funds by officers of the Anti-Saloon League. In a letter to C. R. Mabee, of Detroit, former Anti-Saloon League representative, who has begun a campaign to eliminate graft in connection with the league's work, Jerome declares that the whole system employed by the league to raise funds will be thoroughly sifted and the guilty officials indicted if the criminal law affords a remedy.

Mabee is requested to turn over evidence now in his hands regarding the failure of the league officials to account for money received in contributions and collections taken in churches. The alleged shortage amounts to $200,000.

The evidence also includes proofs that solicitors, to gain admission to pulpits, were instructed to purchase bogus degrees of Doctor of Divinity and Doctor of Philosophy from the defunct Montezuma University of Bessemer, Ala. President Lovett, of the university, in an affidavit declares he never signed nor conferred the degrees.

* * *

Mabee's Letter.

The correspondence between Mr. Mabee and District Attorney Jerome is as follows:

District Attorney Jerome, County Building, New York City—

Dear Sir: For some time past I have been interested with church officials in New York and elsewhere in the elimination of graft from church work.

In this connection it appears that of receipts approximating $1,00,000 it would be difficult for the New York State Anti-Saloon League to account for $200,000 or more of this amount, or to show the churches of your State where they have made any progress in the line of temperance reform.

To assist the league's solicitors to get into the pulpits of your city and State and ask for this money it appears that fraudulent degrees of Doctor of Divinity etc., issued on blanks as formerly used by the defunct Montezuma University, of Bessemer, Ala., have been used. These diplomas were sold by a prominent league official from the office of the New York State Anti-Saloon League at prices ranging from $25 to $75 each. The league's workers were instructed to make these purchases as it would help them in their work. President Lovett, of the Montezuma University, has just stated over his signature that these diplomas were not issued with his knowledge. His signature, however, appears affixed thereto; but the university was burned and went out of business two years before the diplomas were issued.

When an auditing committee called on the Rev. H. H. Russell, D. D., founder of the Anti-Saloon League and chairman of the headquarters committee of the National Anti-Saloon League, before his recent resignation as superintendent of the league in your State and demanded the books for an audit they were informed the books had been removed to the office of an attorney, and, strange to say, neither the league's general attorney, W. B. Wheeler, of Columbus, or its general superintendent, the Rev. P. A. Baker, D. D., demanded their return.

The Rev. U. C. Robinson, of St. Louis, Mo., former superintendent of the Missouri Anti-Saloon League, on April 14, 1909, stated before the Committee on Religious Affairs of the Michigan Legislature that Dr. Russell's commission in one year exceeded $13,000, while the amount unaccounted for by his office in one year was $28,000.

A Political Organization.

Officials and employes of the Anti-Saloon League claim it has received upwards of $500,000 from John D. Rockefeller, whose motives in this connection we do not question. It appears, however, from evidence furnished Thomas Lawson during his attack on Standard Oil in "Frenzied Finance," and which has since been published, that the league has developed into a political organization whose object it is to keep the temperance question agitated in order to foster legislation for corporate interests with which Mr. Rockefeller is connected, and that, in this connection, outside influences select the candidates which shall receive the indorsement of the temperance and church people.

This is evidenced by the fact that some outside interest dictated the constitution and by-laws of the Anti-Saloon League of America, as they appear in the last annual report. By this manipulation State superintendents are chosen by one man, and the precaution was taken to omit delegating any power to the president or vice presidents of the National League. In this manner the will of the Christian people to rid themselves and the temperance cause of graft was set aside during the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, which convened in Philadelphia December 2, 1908, at which time Bishop Luther B. Wilson, president of the National Anti-Saloon League, with a copy of this manipulated constitution in his hands and tears in his eyes, turned to a crowd of delegates and stated:

"My hands are tied. I have no power to act in any capacity. Here is the constitution. I have no right to appoint a committee, or even call a meeting." (From the stenographer's report.) The bishop had promised, through the columns of the Public Ledger, North American, Inquirer and other Philadelphia dailies, that he would appoint a committee to investigate the league's affairs.

One Man In Control.

The entire machinery of the league, from coast to coast, is in the hands of one man, notwithstanding reports to the contrary. For reasons best known to him State superintendents are appointed who can be depended upon to work for the election of such Congressmen, Senators and State officials as may be determined by the framers of the constitution and by-laws. Where there is no object to support any particular candidate indorsements have been sold for cash, which has been recorded in the league's books by false entries. It would seem that such conditions, carried out under cover of the churches, are as important to the public as the insurance scandals, and that your action in this matter will be awaited with interest.

That Dr. Patterson, the present superintendent of the league in your city and State, was sent there by Attorney Wheeler and Superintendent Baker from their home city of Columbus because said Patterson could be depended upon to cover the true condition of affairs is evidenced by the fact that a recent financial statement of the league in your State was fraudulent upon its face, and intended to deceive the clergy and church members of your city and State, and Dr. Patterson is still collecting money to eliminate crime overlooked the irregularities in the office he now occupies.

If the overcrowded condition of your office will not permit of a speedy inquiry into this matter, upon advice to that effect I will have one of the denominational attorneys prepare a list of the witnesses and questions necessary to present this matter in an intelligent manner before the grand jury of your county.

Respectfully yours, C. R. MABEE.

Jerome's Reply.

District Attorney's Office, County of New York—William Travers Jerome, District Attorney—May 10, 1909—Mr. Charles R. Mabee, Healy Building, Detroit, Mich. —Dear Sir: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 17, in regard to the alleged embezzlement of funds collected in this county by the Anti-Saloon League. In some way, with the pressure of business in this office, I have overlooked your communication. I regret the delay in answering it. I shall be very glad to take the matter up. An abuse of this kind should be promptly remedied if the criminal law affords a remedy. I shall be glad if you would send me the minutes which you refer to in your letter, and any additional information that you have. Very truly yours,

WILLIAM TRAVERS, JEROME,
District Attorney.

AGREEMENT TO ADJOURN

Seals Fate of State-Wide Prohibition Measure In Missouri.

Jefferson City, Mo., May 14.—The Senate to-day concurred in the joint resolution passed by the House yesterday and fixing the time for sine die adjournment at noon of May 17. The action practically dooms the prohibition measure, as the conference committee on that bill has been unable to agree.

The conference reports on the prohibition measure were filed in both houses, but no action was taken in either. The committee simply stated its inability to agree. Prohibition leaders are convinced that their only hope of getting a vote at the next election lies in the initiative and referendum amendment passed last November.

No Recount of Votes.

Madison, Ind., May 14.—The suit of the liquor men for a recount of the ballots cast at the local-option election in Jefferson county is dead by law and for want of prosecution.

NEW CHARGE PREFERRED AGAINST AUGUST HEINZ.

New York, May 14.—F. August Heinz, already under indictment on a charge of overcertification of checks of his brother, Otto Heinz, was arraigned before Judge Hough to-day in the United States Circuit Court on a new indictment charging misapplication of the funds of the Mercantile National Bank in March and October, 1907.

He pleaded not guilty, with the privilege of withdrawing the plea and making any motion his counsel might desire. Judge Hough set the case for next Friday, and as Mr. Heinz is already under $50,000 bail no additional security was asked.

UNVEILING

Exercises At Cave Hill Cemetery This Afternoon.

MONUMENT TO MEMORY OF DR. T. T. EATON.

LITTLE GRANDDAUGHTER TO ASSIST IN CEREMONIES.

ADDRESS BY DR. A. C. DIXON.

An event of great interest to many people throughout the South, and especially Baptist people, is the unveiling of the monument to the memory of Dr. T. T. Eaton, late of this city, which occurs at Cave Hill cemetery this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Dr. Eaton was for about twenty-seven years pastor of the Walnut-street Baptist church of Louisville. During his pastorate the church made great growth in numbers and influence, and few men have had the love and confidence of their people in a higher degree than did Dr. Eaton. It was during his pastorate that the church built the beautiful house of worship at Third avenue and St. Catherine street and removed from the old site at Fourth avenue and Walnut street.

Dr. Eaton was also for many years the editor of the Western Recorder, and thus was in close touch with all the Baptist endeavors of the South. In the Southern Baptist convention no voice was heard with more attention and no counsel carried greater weight than his. It is meet that this great body of people should adjourn to the cemetery this afternoon to witness the ceremony of the unveiling of the statue.

A Worthy Tribute.

The monument itself is a worthy tribute and has been built by the gifts of people who loved and revered the great man. A bronze portrait-statue, eight feet high, in graceful and characteristic pose, surmounts a plain white granite pedestal. Leon Hermant, a French sculptor of Chicago, is the artist whose great ability is proved by the excellent likeness and lifelike attitude of the statue. The piece was cast in the foundry of the American Art Bronze Foundry Co., under the supervision of Jules Berchem, who has long had an enviable reputation for superior work in bronze. The Peter & Burghard Stone Co., of this city, made the pedestal, which is worthy of the statue in every way.

To Dr. Henry Alford Porter, the successor of Dr. Eaton in the pastorate of the Walnut-street Baptist church, belongs the credit of undertaking and carrying to successful issue the enterprise of building the monument. Shortly after his coming to Louisville, in December, 1907, he inaugurated the movement, and week by week, by voice and pen, has kept the matter before the Baptists of the South until the monument, which to-day is to be unveiled, has been transformed from a dream to a reality. Most of the gifts have been small, some of them given out of deep poverty, but as expressions of love and admiration they have been of inestimable value.

On the souvenir programmes which will be distributed at Cave Hill this afternoon the names of the 575 known givers have been printed. Many whose names do not appear contributed in the offerings made by churches.

Granddaughter To Draw Cord.

Dr. A. C. Dixon, who delivers the memorial address at Cave Hill, was a warm personal friend of Dr. Eaton for many years. The little granddaughter of Dr. Eaton, Miss Josephine Eaton Farmer, will draw the cord which will remove the veil from before the monument. The programme of the exercises follows:

Invocation—W. D. Powell, D. D., Louisville, Ky.

Hymn—"How Firm a Foundation."

Memorial Address—A. C. Dixon, D. D., Chicago, Ill.

Unveiling of the Statue—By Dr. Eaton's grandchild, Miss Josephine Eaton Farmer.

Prayer—B. G. Lowrey, Blue Mountain, Miss.

Hymn—"Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Benediction—W. E. Powers, D. D., Todds Point.

The Rev. Henry Alford Porter will preside over the exercises.

Express Car Burns.

Pittsburg, May 14.—An Adams Express Company car on the second section of No. 12, the main line express to New York and Boston over the Pennsylvania railroad, caught fire here a few minutes before leaving for the East to-day and was almost totally destroyed with its contents. The loss is said to be heavy. The cause of the fire has not been ascertained.

To Achieve Business Success In Louisville

Or any other city requires stability, frugality, honesty, progressiveness, shrewdness and most essentially—publicity. The former qualifications are all found in more or less prominence in the business man's head, but the latter qualification—that of publicity—is found only in the use of the VERY BEST MEDIUM of advertising. As to the very best medium of exploiting one's wares or trade in Kentucky there can be no question of the unmistakable merit of the great Sunday edition of

The Courier-Journal

During its many years of growth and power in this great community, many a business man by his consistent use of its columns has developed success for himself or his enterprise.

Undoubtedly The Sunday Morning Courier-Journal is the most powerful CONNECTING LINK between the real live business man and the real buying public that can be bought.

BIG TOPICS HANDLED AT MORNING SESSION

Baptist Convention Considers Mission Board and Sunday-School Reports.

The three big topics for discussion at the second session of the convention, which began its labors yesterday morning, was the consideration of Mission Board reports and the report of the Sunday-school Board. With the exception of the time devoted to the devotional services the three hours and a half of the session were given over completely to the reports and the discussion of the reports.

Each of the reports showed great steps forward in this branch of the convention's work. Emphasis was laid particularly on the fund which is being raised to permanently endow a chair of pedagogy at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in this city. The Sunday-school Board has promised to give $1 for every $2 up to an aggregate of $60,000. The announcement of this brought a gift of $500 from the Citadel Square church of Charleston, S. C. Other contributions are expected to pour in, and by the end of the convention, Monday, it is hoped to have the chair permanently endowed.

Joshua Levering, the re-elected president of the convention, and J. A. Scott, of Kentucky, one of the four vice presidents, presided over this session. Aside from the reading of the reports and their discussion, there was a report from the Commission on Systematic Beneficence, appointed at the last convention. Further consideration of the matter was placed in the hands of a new committee, which will report before the close of the convention.

* * *

Commission On Beneficence.

Dr. E. C. Dorgan, of Georgia, read the report of the Commission on Systematic Beneficence. The commission outlined a tentative plan whereby the money for the mission boards will come in a steady stream throughout the entire year rather than on the last days of the convention year.

The Commission is composed of the following: W. B. Crumpton and George G. Miles, Alabama; R. G. Bowers and F. F. Gibson, Arkansas; L. D. Geiger and C. C. Carroll, Florida; J. J. Bennett and E. C. Dargan, Georgia; W. N. Johnston and D. Conger, Louisiana; W. D. Powell and M. P. Hunt, Kentucky; E. B. Hatcher and Frank S. Riggs, Maryland; A. V. Rowe and P. I. Lipsey, Mississippi; M. J. Breaker and T. L. West, Missouri; Livingston Johnson and J. B. Carlyle, North Carolina; W. T. Derieux and Z. T. Cody, South Carolina; W. C. Golden and A. C. Cree, Tennessee; J. B. Gambrell and C. W. Daniel, Texas; William Ellyson and J. T. Henderson, Virginia; J. S. Simpson and J. A. Scott, Oklahoma; R. J. Willingham and W. H. Smith, of the Foreign Mission Board; B. D. Gray and J. F. Love, of the Home Mission Board.

Those who took part in the discussion of the Foreign Mission Board's Report and the Sunday-school Board's report were:

Dr. T. W. O. Kelley, of Missouri, chairman of Sunday-school Board committee; T. P. Bell, of Georgia, editor Christian Index; W. E. Hatcher, of Virginia; the Rev. W. B. Nowlin, of Mayfield, Ky.; R. E. Chambers, Canton, China; Dr. W. Y. Pickard, Savannah, Ga.; the Rev. E. Y. Mullins, W. B. Beauchamp, Byron H. Dement, Dr. J. B. Gambrell, Texas; Dr. J. J. Hall, Virginia.

Enthusiasm Aroused.

Great enthusiasm was aroused by all of these speeches and the efforts of the talkers promise to give a great impetus to the work. All of the addresses came from the foregoing men with a zeal and earnestness that promises a big forward step for the important work of the boards. Many of the speakers urged the raising of the thousands of dollars needed to permanently endow the chair of pedagogy in the seminary here. This is considered the most important work of the entire convention as such a chair is expected to bring untold results for the cause.

At the close of the addresses President Levering announced the following committees to assist and direct the work of advancing the three boards:

* * *

Foreign Board Field Work and Finance Committee.

I. W. Willard, Georgia.
T. H. Ellett, Virginia.
W. Y. Quesenberry, Louisiana.
J. H. Wright, Tennessee.
Stephen Crockett, Florida.

Foreign Board Pagan Fields Committee.

E. W. Stephens, Missouri.
R. E. Chambers, Maryland.
Luther Little, Texas.
W. E. Mitchell, Kentucky.
W. A. Hogan, Georgia.
C. B. Bobo, South Carolina.
H. R. Schramm, Alabama.
O. J. Wade, Arkansas.
A. S. Pettle, Florida.

The committee appointed to follow up the work of securing systematic beneficence is composed of the following:

A. B. Hill, Tennessee; William Ellyson, Virginia; Right C. Moore, North Carolina; B. F. Proctor, Kentucky; W. H. Wolfe, Texas; C. H. Jones, Oklahoma; W. E. Pettus, Alabama; R. T. Frechway, Louisiana; H. R. Bernard, Georgia.

Before the convention closes it will be necessary to elect men to fill the existing vacancies on the Board of Trustees of the Seminary. Yesterday morning the committee selected for that purpose, offered the names of three candidates for each of the vacancies. The Board of Trustees will select from this list of nominations trustees to fill the existing vacancies.

The committee on vacancies reported the following candidates for the places vacant on the Board of Trustees and the board will select one from each group:

Report of Sunday-school Board.

The eighteenth annual report of the Sunday-school board was read in part by J. M. Frost, of Nashville, Tenn., the corresponding secretary. The year just closed was a banner one. Mr. Frost read the following important excerpts from the report:

"This year surpasses all others in the board's history, and will be remembered for its financial record. After steady advance for thirteen years our annual receipts (1903) passed the $100,000 mark—only five years ago. But now the receipts at the end of this five-year period have reached and gone beyond the $200,000 mark—exceeding the receipts of last year by $26,281.80, and giving the splendid total of $205,362.17. This increase is entirely healthy, and comes simply from an immense growth in the volume of business, which is beginning to tax our large building to its full capacity.

"It is interesting and gratifying to note in this connection that the cost of conducting this business has not increased in the same proportion as the advance shown in every department. The circulation of the periodicals has about doubled in these five years, and they give something like 90 per cent. of all the business and receipts. In administration and management we aim at the greatest economy consistent with safety, enlargement and effective aggressiveness."

The total cash gifts for the year from the board were $54,584.85. They were apportioned as follows:

The Home Mission Board	$2,500.00
The Foreign Mission Board	2,500.00
State boards for Sunday-school work	3,550.00
The building fund	19,000.00
The guarantee fund	4,003.00
Permanent Bible fund	2,003.00
The Sunday-school lectureship	250.00
The chair of Sunday-school pedagogy	1,250.00
The board's field work	13,245.48
W. M. U. expense fund	400.00
Special for seminary endowment	5,000.00
Other denominational work	883.37

In speaking of the Sunday-school work Mr. Frost said:

* * *

Question of Grading.

"The advancement in Sunday-school work has brought us to the question of grading, and the Sunday-school board has had to do its part to meet the new needs. With July of 1908 we began this by changing the name of our Primary Quarterly to the Junior Quarterly. We were persuaded by investigation that it was mainly used by pupils beyond the primary grade. The change of name being effected without confusion, we issued in December a new Children's Quarterly for the beginners and primary grades. It is a handsome 32-page illustrated quarterly, with an attractive cover in two colors, and the price was fixed at 2 cents. Its success was immediate, and it has already become one of our established periodicals. For the coming fourth quarter we hope to make various changes in the Junior Quarterly, which will more perfectly adapt it to its new field. This gives us a quarterly for each grade.

"Trained teachers are the most pressing need of the hour in Sunday-school work. To meet this need much attention in all possible ways is being given to training men and women for this high function in church life. The board's teacher training course is coming more and more into use and many thousands are now at work, some in individual study, but the most by far in classes, both as a result and as helping this is the home department in the local school, and even more the adult department. This last is a distinct movement to enlist men and women in Sunday-school endeavor as students of God's word, and all over the country it is becoming a powerful factor for the kingdom of God among men.

"It is manifest and important beyond the power of words to express that Baptists must do their own teacher training. Others may do some things for us and help in some matters, but not in training those who are to teach in our Sunday-schools and serve in directing the thought of our people in their interpretation of the word of God, and in their church life and Christian culture. To meet this pressing need the board is expending money, issuing literature and assisting by whatever means and methods it can."

Special stress was laid by Mr. Frost upon a fund to be used in permanently endowing a chair of pedagogy at the seminary. A very attractive offer has been made. Concerning this offer Mr. Frost said:

* * *

Chair of Pedagogy.

"The Board offers to give $1,000 for every $2,000 paid in by the Sunday-schools, to the aggregate amount of $60,000. And in the first payment it has anticipated the gifts of the Sunday-schools and paid to the seminary $5,000 in cash, hoping thereby to make it more effective. Moreover the Board has requested that the sum of $60,000 be now permanently the Chair of Sunday-school Pedagogy, and that the chair, when endowed, shall be named in honor of Basil Manly, Jr., in memory of him as a former professor in the seminary and in recognition of his distinguished service which he rendered the Sunday-school cause when, through his leadership, the convention, in 1863, appointed its former Sunday-school Board and set a new record in Sunday-school work. This seems to us a service altogether worthy of commendation by our people, and we shall rejoice in joining his name with this new undertaking. It befits Basil Manly, Jr., and his name will give the achievement a new glory to the brotherhood. In the aggregate, they reach a much larger number of our brethren than do any other available agencies. They have shown great willingness to give their service unstintedly to the fostering of our home mission interests and to sending abroad the appeals of the board.

"We have repeatedly known them to magnify mission interests when they were convinced that such faithful insistance was not good "news sense," and they could fill their pages with other things that were useful, while at the same time they possessed the novelty which would attract and hold a large number of subscribers.

"Our papers have thus not only served mission interests without charge, but have sometimes done so at an actual monetary loss. So far from asking regard for this, it is so much of a sacrifice of the life of sacrifice to which the Baptist denominational paper editor and proprietor is devoted that none of his kinds has ever seemed to think it worth while for him to frame the facts into words for the public's ear."

Evangelism and Other Work.

"The report on evangelism shows that eleven evangelists have been employed for all or a part of their time. They have conducted a large number of meetings, both in large cities and in places where Baptists were quite weak. The number of Baptists reported from this branch of the work for the year is 1,793, and the professions of faith 4,732. Home Board evangelism has done much to emphasize the evangelistic spirit of the entire denomination, and has proven a great power toward uniting doctrinal sanity and fervor of spirit.

"For the negroes, in co-operation with the National Baptist Convention (Negro), the Home Board has employed twenty-five evangelists, while five have been engaged through the New Era plan. This work for the negroes is being abundantly blessed, and is doing much toward building a higher standard for their preachers and of denominational efficiency.

Recommendations.

"The report includes a few recommendations. As to the work for cities and foreigners, it recommends larger activities through the board, and more efficient attention from local churches. As to the woman's work, it recommends that of the about $85,000 which the Baptist women of the South appropriate for home missions each year, $25,000 be given especially to mountain mission school work. It is further recommended that a larger amount of money be raised for church building work—not less than $100,000. About $35,000 was thus expended this year. At a cost of $3,000, $54,000 were stimulated in Oklahoma for building thirty churches last year.

"The report closes with the following words: 'With our forces better organized than ever before, with our faith increasing in a fabulous manner, with our people rapidly increasing in intelligence and power, we are able to rise up in the spirit of the Lord to take this land in His name. By all the mercies of the past and by all the prospects of the future, let us essay the holy task.'"

The Foreign Mission Board's report was listened to with the utmost interest. It summed up what was considered one of the most important year's work in allen fields in the history of the convention. It was read in part by R. J. Willingham, corresponding secretary, of Richmond, Va., as follows:

* * *

Foreign Mission Report.

"Our God has graciously blessed us during the year in the work which we have been doing for Him, and in presenting our annual report we gratefully acknowledge His manifold mercies and continued blessings. The past year has been the best that we have ever had in the number of converts on the foreign field. As can be seen from the statistical table, we have had 2,965 baptisms in our various missions. When we remember that in 1895, after we had been working for eighty years, we had only 2,500 enrolled in all of our churches on the mission fields, and now have 2,965 baptisms in one year, we surely shoud praise God and take courage.

"We call especial attention to the Shanghai Baptist College and Seminary, the institution which has been founded by the American Baptist Missionary Union and the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. It now has in it about fifty students in the seminary and forty in the college department. We can rest assured that this number will be greatly increased soon.

"In North China a spirit of revival has been in the churches and over 400 have been added by baptism. For this we should praise God. When we remember that Morrison and others in opening up the work labored in China for twenty-seven years and saw four converts, and that now we see 400 in one of our missions in one year we can get an idea of the marvelous change that has come in that country. We call attention also to the fact that the brethren in North China have already started the work in Manchuria. Though it has been only a small beginning, yet it means that we must reach out as soon as possible and put a number of workers in that great country.

"We are glad to see that the work in Argentina, a rapidly developing country, has started off so well. Our first missionaries went there in 1906. Already six churches have been organized with a membership of 318. Sixty of these were baptized during the past year. Because of our people in the beauty and wealth of the city of Buenos Ayres, which is the largest city in South America, and larger than New Orleans and St. Louis put together. There are over 1,000,000 inhabitants. It is important that we reach this city and section at once.

Educational Department.

"The Educational Department has experienced a prosperous year. The growth of the mission study idea has been most gratifying, and the response to the work of this department has shown clearly that the demoniation is thoroughly in sympathy with this phase of the Board's activities.

"Seven hundred and sixty-two classes have been organized, with a total membership of 9,466. This is an increase over last year of 245 classes and 3,746 members. These classes have been organized in Sunday-schools, B. Y. P. U.'s, Women's Societies, Men's Leagues, colleges, etc. Peculiarly gratifying has been the progress made in mission study by the students in the colleges. It has become a settled policy of many student bodies to foster voluntary mission study. Over two thousand students pursued our mission study courses during the year. This is especially significant, not only because many will be influenced to volunteer for mission service, but because of the fact that from these institutions will come young men and women trained for leadership in mission study in the churches.

"There is just ten years since we last met in Louisville, Ky. We think it well to let our people get some idea of the increase in our work in that time, and so we give some data that will be interesting. In 1899 we had on the foreign field 82 missionaries and 128 native workers—or, of worship; 845 baptisms were reported for the year; a total membership in all of our missions of 5,347. The contributions for the work in 1899 aggregated $109,267.48. This year we report 231 missionaries, with 375 native workers, a total force of 606 workers; 259 churches; 162 houses of worship; 2,930 baptisms; total membership, 16,586; receipts, $486,707.62. This comparison cannot bring out the very great improvements which have been made on the field in facilities for work such as hospitals, schools, theological seminaries, publishing houses, etc.

"The past year has been one of glorious advance with us. We have had hundreds more conversions and baptisms than in any former year. Our receipts have gone $58,000 ahead of any previous year. Our work in the foreign fields has been greatly strengthened. Improved facilities have been provided for the workers and the work. We have entered on a new era. The heart of God's people ought to be thrilled, and with renewed zeal and consecration they should press forward.

"With the marvelous openings that are presented to us in foreign fields, the outpouring of God's spirit upon the workers, scores in the homeland asking to be sent out to the work, we present our report to the convention and ask the brethren prayerfully to advise the Board as to what course it shall take for the coming year."

The devotional exercises yesterday were conducted by the Rev. W. J. Rikard, of Augusta, Ga. All the delegates joined in the singing of hymnal numbers during the exercises.

Literature.

"The report expresses gratitude that a fine home mission literature is now being produced in this country; tells of the addition of the editorial secretary, Victor I. Masters, to its staff in part, that it may more fully perform its proper share in mission literature propagandism, and stresses the denominational weeklies as the most effective publicity agents of the board in the following language:

"'We unhesitatingly pronounce the denominational weeklies as the most helpful publicity agencies, in keeping the fourth quarter before the brotherhood. In the aggregate, they reach a much larger number of our brethren than do any other available agencies. They have shown great willingness to give their service unstintedly to the fostering of our home mission interests and to sending abroad the appeals of the board.

"'We have repeatedly known them to magnify mission interests when they were convinced that such faithful insistance was not good "news sense," and they could fill their pages with other things that were useful, while at the same time they possessed the novelty which would attract and hold a large number of subscribers.

"'Our papers have thus not only served mission interests without charge, but have sometimes done so at an actual monetary loss. So far from asking regard for this, it is so much of a sacrifice of the life of sacrifice to which the Baptist denominational paper editor and proprietor is devoted that none of his kinds has ever seemed to think it worth while for him to frame the facts into words for the public's ear.'

Evangelism and Other Work.

"The report on evangelism shows that eleven evangelists have been employed for all or a part of their time. They have conducted a large number of meetings, both in large cities and in places where Baptists were quite weak. The number of Baptists reported from this branch of the work for the year is 1,793, and the professions of faith 4,732. Home Board evangelism has done much to emphasize the evangelistic spirit of the entire denomination, and has proven a great power toward uniting doctrinal sanity and fervor of spirit.

"For the negroes, in co-operation with the National Baptist Convention (Negro), the Home Board has employed twenty-five evangelists, while five have been engaged through the New Era plan. This work for the negroes is being abundantly blessed, and is doing much toward building a higher standard for their preachers and of denominational efficiency.

Recommendations.

"The report includes a few recommendations. As to the work for cities and foreigners, it recommends larger activities through the board, and more efficient attention from local churches. As to the woman's work, it recommends that of the about $85,000 which the Baptist women of the South appropriate for home missions each year, $25,000 be given especially to mountain mission school work. It is further recommended that a larger amount of money be raised for church building work—not less than $100,000. About $35,000 was thus expended this year. At a cost of $3,000, $54,000 were stimulated in Oklahoma for building thirty churches last year.

"The report closes with the following words: 'With our forces better organized than ever before, with our faith increasing in a fabulous manner, with our people rapidly increasing in intelligence and power, we are able to rise up in the spirit of the Lord to take this land in His name. By all the mercies of the past and by all the prospects of the future, let us essay the holy task.'"

The Foreign Mission Board's report was listened to with the utmost interest. It summed up what was considered one of the most important year's work in allen fields in the history of the convention. It was read in part by R. J. Willingham, corresponding secretary, of Richmond, Va., as follows:

Foreign Mission Report.

"Our God has graciously blessed us during the year in the work which we have been doing for Him, and in presenting our annual report we gratefully acknowledge His manifold mercies and continued blessings. The past year has been the best that we have ever had in the number of converts on the foreign field. As can be seen from the statistical table, we have had 2,965 baptisms in our various missions. When we remember that in 1895, after we had been working for eighty years, we had only 2,500 enrolled in all of our churches on the mission fields, and now have 2,965 baptisms in one year, we surely shoud praise God and take courage.

"We call especial attention to the Shanghai Baptist College and Seminary, the institution which has been founded by the American Baptist Missionary Union and the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. It now has in it about fifty students in the seminary and forty in the college department. We can rest assured that this number will be greatly increased soon.

"In North China a spirit of revival has been in the churches and over 400 have been added by baptism. For this we should praise God. When we remember that Morrison and others in opening up the work labored in China for twenty-seven years and saw four converts, and that now we see 400 in one of our missions in one year we can get an idea of the marvelous change that has come in that country. We call attention also to the fact that the brethren in North China have already started the work in Manchuria. Though it has been only a small beginning, yet it means that we must reach out as soon as possible and put a number of workers in that great country.

"We are glad to see that the work in Argentina, a rapidly developing country, has started off so well. Our first missionaries went there in 1906. Already six churches have been organized with a membership of 318. Sixty of these were baptized during the past year. Because of our people in the beauty and wealth of the city of Buenos Ayres, which is the largest city in South America, and larger than New Orleans and St. Louis put together. There are over 1,000,000 inhabitants. It is important that we reach this city and section at once.

Educational Department.

"The Educational Department has experienced a prosperous year. The growth of the mission study idea has been most gratifying, and the response to the work of this department has shown clearly that the demoniation is thoroughly in sympathy with this phase of the Board's activities.

"Seven hundred and sixty-two classes have been organized, with a total membership of 9,466. This is an increase over last year of 245 classes and 3,746 members. These classes have been organized in Sunday-schools, B. Y. P. U.'s, Women's Societies, Men's Leagues, colleges, etc. Peculiarly gratifying has been the progress made in mission study by the students in the colleges. It has become a settled policy of many student bodies to foster voluntary mission study. Over two thousand students pursued our mission study courses during the year. This is especially significant, not only because many will be influenced to volunteer for mission service, but because of the fact that from these institutions will come young men and women trained for leadership in mission study in the churches.

"This is just ten years since we last met in Louisville, Ky. We think it well to let our people get some idea of the increase in our work in that time, and so we give some data that will be interesting. In 1899 we had on the foreign field 82 missionaries and 128 native workers—or, of worship; 845 baptisms were reported for the year; a total membership in all of our missions of 5,347. The contributions for the work in 1899 aggregated $109,267.48. This year we report 231 missionaries, with 375 native workers, a total force of 606 workers; 259 churches; 162 houses of worship; 2,930 baptisms; total membership, 16,586; receipts, $486,707.62. This comparison cannot bring out the very great improvements which have been made on the field in facilities for work such as hospitals, schools, theological seminaries, publishing houses, etc.

"The past year has been one of glorious advance with us. We have had hundreds more conversions and baptisms than in any former year. Our receipts have gone $58,000 ahead of any previous year. Our work in the foreign fields has been greatly strengthened. Improved facilities have been provided for the workers and the work. We have entered on a new era. The heart of God's people ought to be thrilled, and with renewed zeal and consecration they should press forward.

"With the marvelous openings that are presented to us in foreign fields, the outpouring of God's spirit upon the workers, scores in the homeland asking to be sent out to the work, we present our report to the convention and ask the brethren prayerfully to advise the Board as to what course it shall take for the coming year."

The devotional exercises yesterday were conducted by the Rev. W. J. Rikard, of Augusta, Ga. All the delegates joined in the singing of hymnal numbers during the exercises.

Question of Grading.

"The advancement in Sunday-school work has brought us to the question of grading, and the Sunday-school board has had to do its part to meet the new needs. With July of 1908 we began this by changing the name of our Primary Quarterly to the Junior Quarterly. We were persuaded by investigation that it was mainly used by pupils beyond the primary grade. The change of name being effected without confusion, we issued in December a new Children's Quarterly for the beginners and primary grades. It is a handsome 32-page illustrated quarterly, with an attractive cover in two colors, and the price was fixed at 2 cents. Its success was immediate, and it has already become one of our established periodicals. For the coming fourth quarter we hope to make various changes in the Junior Quarterly, which will more perfectly adapt it to its new field. This gives us a quarterly for each grade.

"Trained teachers are the most pressing need of the hour in Sunday-school work. To meet this need much attention in all possible ways is being given to training men and women for this high function in church life. The board's teacher training course is coming more and more into use and many thousands are now at work, some in individual study, but the most by far in classes, both as a result and as helping this is the home department in the local school, and even more the adult department. This last is a distinct movement to enlist men and women in Sunday-school endeavor as students of God's word, and all over the country it is becoming a powerful factor for the kingdom of God among men.

"It is manifest and important beyond the power of words to express that Baptists must do their own teacher training. Others may do some things for us and help in some matters, but not in training those who are to teach in our Sunday-schools and serve in directing the thought of our people in their interpretation of the word of God, and in their church life and Christian culture. To meet this pressing need the board is expending money, issuing literature and assisting by whatever means and methods it can."

Special stress was laid by Mr. Frost upon a fund to be used in permanently endowing a chair of pedagogy at the seminary. A very attractive offer has been made. Concerning this offer Mr. Frost said:

* * *

Chair of Pedagogy.

"The Board offers to give $1,000 for every $2,000 paid in by the Sunday-schools, to the aggregate amount of $60,000. And in the first payment it has anticipated the gifts of the Sunday-schools and paid to the seminary $5,000 in cash, hoping thereby to make it more effective. Moreover the Board has requested that the sum of $60,000 be now permanently the Chair of Sunday-school Pedagogy, and that the chair, when endowed, shall be named in honor of Basil Manly, Jr., in memory of him as a former professor in the seminary and in recognition of his distinguished service which he rendered the Sunday-school cause when, through his leadership, the convention, in 1863, appointed its former Sunday-school Board and set a new record in Sunday-school work. This seems to us a service altogether worthy of commendation by our people, and we shall rejoice in joining his name with this new undertaking. It befits Basil Manly, Jr., and his name will give the achievement a new glory to the brotherhood. In the aggregate, they reach a much larger number of our brethren than do any other available agencies. They have shown great willingness to give their service unstintedly to the fostering of our home mission interests and to sending abroad the appeals of the board.

"We have repeatedly known them to magnify mission interests when they were convinced that such faithful insistance was not good "news sense," and they could fill their pages with other things that were useful, while at the same time they possessed the novelty which would attract and hold a large number of subscribers.

WORK ACCOMPHLISED IN FOREIGN FIELDS

Burden of Yesterday Afternoon's Session of the Big Southern Baptist Convention.

Foreign missions was the ruling passion with the delegates to the convention at the third session yesterday afternoon. The foreign mission report of the morning session was amplified in all its branches and ramifications in the afternoon. All the committees appointed to give close study to the various branches of the foreign mission board's workwereported before the close of the third session.

The feature of the session was the introduction, one by one, of the returned foreign missionaries and the volunteers who are about to enter the field. R. J. Willingham, the secretary of this board, called them to the front of the stage, introduced them and expatiated upon their valor as soldiers in bringing about the evangelization of the world. The Chautauqua salute was given the field workers as they stood by the side of Mr. Willingham. The finest kind of musical enthusiasm greeted the missionaries and the handkerchief salute was not given once, but manifold times. A spirit of conquest of pagan and papal lands filled the armory and seized hold of the 1,500 delegates with a zeal and enthusiasm which was not to be denied. When Mr. Willingham called for volunteers to push the work in foreign lands twelve hands were raised. Among the twelve were women and men—young people all, ready to vigorously take up the labors and strong in their determination to give up their home and friends for benighted mankind.

Returned Missionaries Talk.

Intermingled with the reports of the special committee were talks by some of the more important of the returned missionaries. All the reports and addresses on the subject of foreign missions were in a hopeful key. Great strides have been noticed during the year and it was reported that the converts were coming in shoals in all lands. The only criticism offered was on the small per capita donations for use in foreign fields. The average last year was 22 cents. There were more than 10,000 churches which contributed nothing. Emphasis also was laid by the speakers upon the necessity of systematic beneficence and the relegating of the habit of coming up with the year's money for foreign missions at the last moment. The value of religious tracts and current literature was dwelt upon at length.

The missionaries introduced by Mr. Willingham were: J. B. Hartwell, fifty years in the service; C. W. Pruitt, Miss Jessie Pettigrew, a trained nurse; J. C. Owen and wife, T. C. Britton, Miss Mary E. Willford, Miss Lydia Hopkins, in Mexico; Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Somers, T. F. McRay, Dr. P. S. Evans, Miss Anna Hartwell, Miss Lulu Whilden, E. A. Jackson, Miss Willie Kelly, Miss Minnie Hopkins, T. F. McRay.

The volunteers were: Miss Jaule Lisle, Miss Floy White, Miss Lettie Spainhour, Miss Jewell Leggett, A. B. Langston, E. B. Clark.

T. L. White, of South Carolina, read the first committee report. It was on papal fields.

Report On Papal Fields.

"This has been the best year our work in Brazil has ever had," said the report in substance. "The gospel has struck deep root in Brazil. Great numbers of converts are being drawn into the work. Noble service is being given by the Brazil Baptist Publishing House.

"The outlook on all papal fields is encouraging. We must furnish a fuller equipment. We must have more chapels, more schools and better printing facilities."

The next part of the afternoon was given over to returned missionaries, because the chairmen of the committees on the foreign board were not yet prepared with their reports. The first of these returned missionaries to speak was E. A. Jackson, who has been working in Upper Brazil.

"We have every liberty in this country, and our work is never interfered with," began Mr. Jackson. "The Brazilians never leave until after the baptismals. The work has been going on in Brazil only twenty-seven years. More than 5,000 Brazilians in that time have been converted. More than $20,000 has been raised in this part of the country for the work. We have never had to pay for a hall in the interior, as they were all given to us. Our field is as large as the State of Texas, and as yet we have no native helpers. Some of the wealthiest and most influential people have become converts.

"One judge wants to found a school, so the people may be taught Christianity. Nearly 200 have been converted in my territory this year. We have spent at one time five months without communication with the outside world, yet these people, who had never seen a Protestant, welcomed us with open arms."

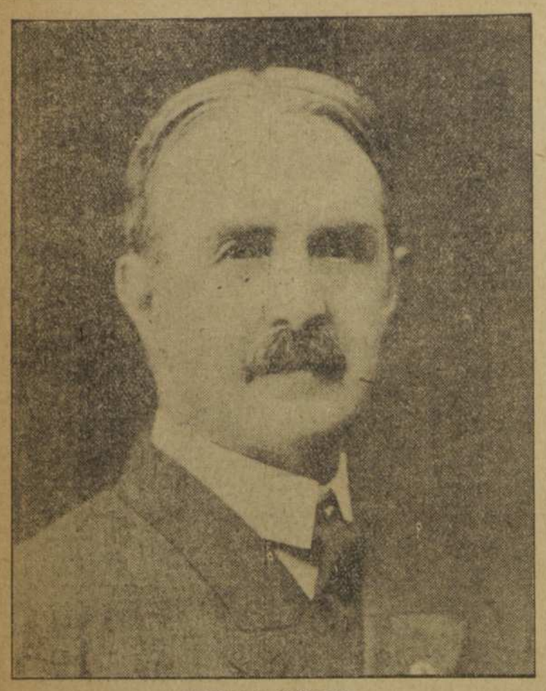
Report On Pagan Fields.

E. W. Stevens, of Missouri, next read the report on Pagan Fields. Mr. Stevens discussed the situation as it is to-day in China and Japan.

"The agencies of civilization," said Mr. Stevens in part, "are turning the people of China and Japan from their ancient religions. There is also a golden opportunity all over Asia and in the heart of the Dark Continent. The native ministers and churches are growing stronger daily. In Africa there were 117 baptisms last year with only three missionaries in the field. Our missionary force ought to be so increased so we can push into the interior of China and Africa.

"Japan is being well covered, and there is great hope for the work here. The greatest need in Japan is trained native teachers. This need is being supplied by the native seminaries.

"China is our oldest and greatest missionary field. China will make the greatest trophy of all the world. The missionaries here meet throngs anxious to embrace the faith. There are 174 native workers of all kinds in one canton alone. Many of our churches are strong, active and self-supporting. Millions of pages of Bibles and tracts are being sent out. There are three



THOMAS D. OSBORNE,
Of Louisville, who is one of the leading spirits in the Southern Baptist Convention.

NEWS NOTES AND GOSSIP OF THE CONVENTION.

—The Rev. L. R. Scarborough, of Texas, has recently resigned the pastorate of the First Baptist church of Abilene to accept the position of financial agent and professor of evangelism in the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in that State.

—The Rev. C. C. Coleman, well known in Kentucky, has just taken charge of the First Baptist church in Abilene, Tex. Since leaving Kentucky he has held pastorates in Washington, D. C., and San Antonio, Tex.

—President B. G. Lowrey, of Blue Mountain College, Miss., is one of Dixie's Brahmin and is one of the wittiest laymen in attendance upon the sessions of the convention. He is giving a good deal of time to the interests of the Tri-State Sanitarium movement, which looks to the establishment of a Baptist sanitarium in the city of Memphis.

—The Rev. F. C. McConnell, pastor of Calvary church, Kansas City, was one of the belated arrivals yesterday. He says this is the thirtieth session of the convention that he has attended. Dr. McConnell was for a time secretary of the Home Mission Board, immediately preceding Dr. B. D. Gray in office. He is one of the finest orators among the Baptists.

—The Rev. H. A. Bagby, who has held pastorates at Suffolk and Richmond, Va., then in Greenwood, S. C., has just taken charge of the First Baptist church of Liberty, Mo., the site of William Jewell College, which is the largest male college in the South.

—The Rev. Weston Bruner is now pastor of the First Baptist church in San Antonio, having just gone there from the pastorate of the Fifth church of Washington City. He is a fine type of the evangelistic type.

—H. R. Pollard, of Richmond, Va., who was elected one of the vice presidents of the convention, is city attorney for the city of Richmond, and is prominent in all the Baptist councils of his city and State. He is already being talked of as the successor to the incumbent of the presidential chair. He makes an admirable presiding officer.

—Now that the committee has been appointed on time and place of the next meeting, the contest of the cities for the next convention is rounding the acute stage. The recommendation of the committee, however, does not necessarily mean much. Almost every year some delegate moves to amend the committee's report by substituting some other place than that mentioned, and then the debate in open meeting is on.

—The Rev. George W. McDaniel, pastor of the First Baptist church of Richmond, Va., is one of the finest specimens of the physical manhood in the convention, and he also preaches to one of the largest congregations. The church over which he presides is 118 years old, yet their pastor does not appear to be above 36. He is sure to be assigned to one of the leading pulpits on Sunday.

—The Rev. H. A. Sumrell, who was for many years pastor of the Baptist church at Winchester, Ky., is now pastor of the First church of Alexandria, La., which just dedicated what many claim to be one of the most beautiful and best equipped church houses in all the land. It cost about $80,000. Dr. Sumrell is being greeted by a great many of his Kentucky friends.

—M. M. Welch, of Atlanta, Ga., is one of the modest laymen who follow the proceedings of the convention with intelligent interest, yet his voice is never heard on the floor. He is editor of the Baptist Home Mission Board and business manager of the Home Board publications.

—George W. Carroll, who is here, is one of the richest and one of the most liberal of the Texas Baptist laymen. He has taken a peculiar interest in the development of the various Baptist institutions of his State and can always be counted on for a liberal donation when the collections are taken.

—The Rev. R. M. Inlow, of Joplin, Mo., was one of the most popular and also one of the most proficient field men in the employ of the Sunday-school Board, but he said his heart turned continually to the work of the pastor. Last year he resigned his position with the board and went to work with the saints at Joplin, where his pastoral work has been almost phenomenal.

—The Rev. John Jeter Hurt, who is now pastor of the First Baptist church, at Conway, Ark., was for several years an employe of the Louisville Cement Company, in this city, before he entered the ministry. He is now leading his people in the erection of a new $30,000 church building, which will be completed by the end of the present year.

—The Rev. Dr. Virgin, who is a prominent delegate to the convention, was at one time pastor at Eminence, Ky. He is now pastor of the First Baptist church of Jackson, Tenn., which is the site of the Southwestern Baptist University. Dr. Virgin says his people are making an admirable beginning to the church-building movement. The new church will cost about $50,000.

—The Rev. Lansing Burrows, secretary of the convention, has been until recently pastor of the First Baptist church of Nashville, Tenn. During the early part of the spring he went to the pastorate of the Baptist church in Columbus, Ga., where he says he is having a most delightful work.

—The Rev. L. B. Warren, of the First church, Owensboro, Ky., is one of the prominent bachelor preachers at the convention. Dr. Warren went from the Louisville seminary in 1905, and since that time has held pastorates in Ocala, Fla.; Beaumont, Tex., and Chicago, Ill., at each of which places his work was almost phenomenal.

—The Rev. John Roach Straton is a prominent delegate from Baltimore, where he is pastor of the leading church of the city. Prior to his going there he was pastor of the Immanuel church, of a prominent church in Portland, Ore., last year. Dr. Straton undertook to capture a prize of $1,000 which had been offered by the Commercial Club of that city for the best essay setting forth the advantages of living in Portland. A few weeks after he returned to his Baltimore pastorate he received a telegram from the secretary of the club announcing that he had won the prize.

—The Rev. R. C. Buckner, superintendent of the Baptist Orphans' Home of Texas, is one of the most modest and yet one of the strongest men attending the convention. His hair and beard are white and his step falters, yet he gives careful attention to the hundreds of duties incumbent upon him as guardian for more than a thousand orphan children committed to his care. By the children of the home he has been known for many years as "Father Buckner."

—A delegate was heard to remark yesterday that Southern Baptists have the greatest train of mission secretaries in all the world. His reference was to the Rev. R. J. Willingham, secretary of the Foreign Mission Board; the Rev. B. D. Gray, secretary of the Home Mission Board, and the Rev. M. Frost, secretary of the Sunday-school Board. However others may think or say, it is abundantly evident that Southern Baptists are satisfied with what they have.

—The Rev. E. E. Folk, of Tennessee, editor of the Baptist and Reflector, is receiving the congratulations of his brethren on the tremendous victories which were won for that State during the last meeting of the General Assembly. Mr. Folk was president of the Tennessee Anti-Saloon League, and took a very prominent part in the campaign.

—General Evangelist W. W. Hamilton, of the Home Mission Board, is conducting evangelistic consultation meetings in the Fifth-street Methodist church each morning at 8:30 o'clock. These meetings are open to all who wish to do more efficient evangelistic work, whether pastors or general evangelists.

—Word has been received here that E. O. Excell, of Chicago, the well-known hymn composer and choral director, will be here Saturday afternoon to assist the Rev. W. W. Hamilton in his evangelistic meeting on Sunday. Mr. Excell says he will also make an effort to bring with him Charles H. Gabriel, a composer of sacred music, known all over the land.

—Dr. S. Y. Jameson, president of the Mercer University, Macon, Ga., met a large number of the alumni of that institution yesterday afternoon at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. An informal conference was had about matters of their own interest and future work. Great prosperity has come to Mercer University since Dr. Jameson became its president three years ago.

—The Rev. J. C. Massee, pastor of the First church, of Chattanooga, Tenn., is tall and straight and long-haired and eloquent. He has been in his present pastorate but a few weeks, but already he seems to be taken on new life. He went from Raleigh, N. C., to his present field.

—Delegates to the convention say they are greatly pleased with the unusual amount of space being given to its proceedings by the Louisville papers, and they like the intelligent grasp of the proceedings evidenced by the reporters. The Courier-Journal gave five pages to the proceedings yesterday morning, and copies of this paper were very much in demand.

—The Rev. J. S. Dill, pastor of the Baptist church at Bowling Green, Ky., is receiving the hearty congratulations of his friends over his recovery from a long and tedious spell of sickness. It was thought for several months that Dr. Dill could not possibly recover. He has just returned from the Battle Creek Sanitarium of Michigan.

—The Rev. J. H. Dew is a prominent evangelist of the State of Missouri, and Mrs. Dew accompanies him on his trips and lends assistance in the music of the services. Both of them are attending the convention and renewing old acquaintances in Kentucky.

—The Rev. John William Jones, a prominent Baptist for many years and a Confederate known all over the land, is missed at this convention. He "crossed over the river" several months ago, and now "rests under the shade of the trees." Some one who knew him as he was will probably deliver a memorial address in his honor at the memorial meeting Sunday afternoon.

—The Rev. A. J. Barton, of Texas, is not attending the meetings. Owing to sickness in his family he could not come. He is greatly missed, for at one time or another he has been officially identified with the work of all three of the convention boards, and his duties in connection with these interests took him into all parts of the South.

—The Rev. Z. T. Cody, for many years pastor of the Baptist church at Georgetown, Ky., is now pastor of the Baptist church at Greenville, S. C. He is recognized as one of the profoundest thinkers in the ranks of the Southern Baptist ministry. Dr. Cody's head is white, but his heart is as young as any that throbs with zeal in the Master's cause.

—The devotional exercises yesterday morning were led by the Rev. W. L. Pickard, of the Broadway Baptist church. During the informal opening exercises forty or fifty delegates arose and one after another quoted a favorite passage of Scripture.

—President J. W. Conger, of the Southwestern Baptist University, Jackson, Tenn., came in yesterday.

—The stately form of the Rev. B. H. Carroll, president of Southwestern Theological Seminary, Waco, Tex., is greatly missed at this convention. He seldom misses a session, but could not come this time.

—The Baptists are using quite a number of laymen as active leaders of their forces.

—The Rev. H. E. Gabby, of Cadiz, Ky., is one of the handsomest of the younger members.

—Dr. S. J. Porter, of Richmond, Va., who is field secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, was once a missionary himself in the foreign field.

—Pine Bluff, Ark., has three laymen as delegates. They are H. C. Fox, W. W. Byrd and Theodore Wallerman.

—T. H. Ellett, of Richmond, Va., is a leading business man of his city, and for many years has been prominent in the management of city affairs. He is a regular attendant upon the sessions of the body.

—The Rev. E. T. Poulson, of New Albany, who is a native Virginian, says he is very much at home in a Southern Baptist convention.

—Pref. R. T. Vann, of Raleigh, N. C., is president of the Baptist Female College of North Carolina. For a number of years he has been deprived of both hands, yet no member of the convention accomplishes more work.

—J. W. Williams, of Wynne, Ark., is a prominent merchant and churchman in his State. He and his wife are attending the convention.

—The Rev. J. A. Taylor, of Shelbyville, Tenn., was once pastor of Portland-avenue church, this city. He is meeting with great success in his present pastorate.

—The Rev. H. Beauchamp, of Dallas, Tex., is one of the field secretaries of the Sunday-school Board, and is addressing his talents especially to the improvement of church architecture.

—The Rev. C. C. Carroll, of Ocala, Fla., has recently accepted a call to the pastorate at the Third Baptist Church at Owensboro, Ky. He is a son of the distinguished Dr. B. H. Carroll, of Texas.

—Dr. F. W. Moore, of the faculty of Vanderbilt University, is a leading educator and delegate in attendance upon the sessions of the convention.

—Several young ministers are here serving as correspondents for daily papers. Among them are the Rev. Alex W. Bealer, representing the Atlanta Journal; the Rev. W. R. Owen, representing the Baltimore Sun," and the Rev. A. C. Cree, of Nashville, Tenn., representing the "Nashville Banner."

—The Rev. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, of Atlanta, is believed by many to be one of the strongest preachers in the convention. It is said that ovations were made to him recently by the pulpit committee of Euclid Avenue church, Cleveland, Ohio, the church of which Mr. Rockefeller is a member. Dr. White left Louisville last night in order to reach Georgia in time to deliver a commencement sermon.

—The Rev. L. E. Barton recently resigned the pastorate of the Baptist church at Quitman, Ga., to take charge of the First Baptist church of West Point, Miss. His work at this point has already met with unusual success.

—The Rev. J. S. Rogers is a new recruit to the rank of missionary secretaries. He is the leader of mission forces in the State of Arkansas, and under his leadership the Baptists of that State are more to missions the past year than ever before in their history.

—The Rev. J. J. Taylor, until three years ago president of Georgetown College in this State, is at present pastor of the First Baptist church in Knoxville, Tenn., where he says he has one of the most delightful pastorates of his life. He also is a son-in-law of Kentucky.

—The Rev. Junius W. Millard, of Atlanta, believes that each year the president of the convention ought to favor the body with a set address, and upon which shall be gathered up his observations and suggestions touching the denominational work at that particular time. His idea is that at least an hour ought to be set aside for this address, and that it ought to be one of the very best hours of the convention. In line with this idea, he introduced a resolution yesterday, and the convention adopted it without a dissenting vote. President Levering, therefore, will deliver a formal address at the opening of the next convention.

—The Rev. J. M. Frost, secretary of the Sunday-school Board at Nashville, Tenn., announced yesterday to some friends that in the very near future he will issue another book from his own pen, entitled "Our Church Life: or Serving God on God's Plan." Dr. Frost is not only one of the very best business men in the Baptist ranks, but he is one of the most successful nominational themes of unusual vigor. He is the first and only secretary of the Sunday-school Board, and under his leadership the business of the board has come up to an aggregate of nearly a million dollars. During the past three years he has found time to write two books which have already been issued. These are "The Mighty Dignity of Baptism" and "The Supper of Our Lord." These two books have been brought out in several editions.

—All prospects indicate that this convention will easily be a record-breaker in point of attendance. Before the body was called to order Thursday night the enrollment had reached two-thirds of the largest delegation ever enrolled. It looks now as if the present session will witness the enrollment of 2,000 regularly-accredited delegates. No record is kept of visitors or of those taken on new life. He must be a delegate to the regular convention. It is estimated by those who follow the annual meetings that for every regular delegate there are three more visitors. If this be true, then the attendance this year will be nearly beyond 6,000.

—The convention will not attend to any business to-morrow, although there will be services for almost every hour of the day. The Sabbath is devoted almost entirely to devotional meetings. Hundreds of the visiting ministers will preach at the different churches and mission stations in Louisville, and very many of them will accept invitations to go to nearby towns to preach. Besides this almost every Sunday-school in the city will have one or more addresses by Sunday-school experts. The laymen will probably have another rally some time during the day, and a special meeting on "Evangelism" will be held at the Walnut-street Baptist church. The meeting will be in charge of the Rev. W. W. Hamilton, general evangelist of the Home Mission Board. He will have with him E. O. Excell, of Chicago, who will have charge of the music on that occasion.

—The Rev. W. T. Amis, of Hot Springs, Ark., who has achieved almost a national reputation as expounder of the principles of civic righteousness, reached the city yesterday. Dr. Amis is a native of Kentucky, and returns to the State for a brief visit almost every year. He and his congregation are just now addressing themselves to the task of building a handsome new church. The campaign for money will be pushed in all the Southern States during the next year, and the collection to-day is expected to give a mighty impetus to this campaign.

All Want To Help.

The delegates to the convention seem to want a collection for the seminary. Many of them are anxious to subscribe. This was manifest yesterday morning when Dr. Frost, secretary of the Sunday-school board, of Nashville, Tenn., incidentally offered to give $1,000 from the funds of that board for every $2,000 subscribed by the Sunday-schools of the South, provided the amount of $60,000 should be set aside for the endowment of a chair of Sunday-school pedagogy. At once there was a spontaneous ripple of applause, notwithstanding that there is a rule of the convention that there shall be no applause upon the floor of the convention. Dr. Frost was interrupted at once by the offer of several subscriptions on behalf of Sunday-schools represented on the convention floor. He asked that subscriptions be not made at that time, but half a dozen were offered anyway.

Alumni Are Proud.

The hundreds of alumni who are attending the convention seem to be prouder than ever of the work the seminary is doing now. They are glad not only because their alma mater stands true to the teachings of the Bible, when so many other institutions seem to be cutting loose from their moorings, but they rejoice also in the fact that the members of the faculty are leading from the printing presses so many able books which help to stem the rising tide of infidelity and to strengthen the zeal of their Baptist brothers in all lines of Christian endeavor. Only this week Prof. A. T. Robertson has received an offer from a prominent publisher in Germany for the privilege of translating his New Testament Grammar into that language and putting it upon the market in that land of ancient universities and world-renowned scholarship.

For the last four years delegates to the annual meetings of the Southern Baptist Convention have been looking to Louisville for this year and this day. It is a day of rejoicing, and its record will tell mightily on the future history of Southern Baptists.

BIG DAY FOR SEMINARY

Planned by All Interests In Baptist Convention.

Hope To Raise Great Fund For Golden Jubilee.

Appeal To Be Made by Dr. William Hatcher.

SAID TO BE GREAT EXHORTER.

This is expected to be a high day in the history of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, for "The Year of Jubilee Has Come!" Fifty years ago the foundations were laid for the institution in the little city of Greenville, S. C. Then the question of theological education as a preparation for the ministry was in the experimental stage, and many good men looked askance at the establishment of a theological seminary, however humble. Then there were only four professors in the faculty, but these were men whose names will be forever enshrined in the annals of Southern Baptist history. They were James P. Boyce, Basil Manly, Jr., John A. Broadus and William Williams. Then there were only twenty-six students, but they were earnest, and three of them, the Rev. C. H. Ryland, of Richmond, Va.; the Rev. G. W. Hyde, of Missouri, and the Rev. W. J. Shipman, of Virginia, are in attendance upon the convention this week. Then there was a humble appeal daily to the Great Teacher for guidance and there was unfaltering devotion to the Book of Books.

Changes of Half a Century.

Changes have come in the last fifty years. The institution that had such humble beginnings in Greenville has been removed to the city of Louisville, where its buildings occupy the greater part of an entire block. The faculty has grown to nine members, men who are recognized on both sides of the sea as foremost in scholarship and teaching ability. The number of students has increased year by year until to-day the enrollment has reached 320. But the present members of faculty and student body still "make humble appeal daily to the Great Teacher for guidance and there is devotion to the Book of Books." This institution upon which the affections of Southern Baptists have been lavished through the years has furnished leaders for every line of denominational work. For seventeen years and four thousand preachers of the gospel went into the land, more than a hundred of whom have gone to carry the message to the earth's remotest bounds. The seminary has been loyal to every denominational interest through the years, and its teachings have called forth true ring on great questions of evangelism and missions in all lands. This is the reason why loyal sons from around the world meet together to-day to thank God for the seminary, to study her needs and to make grateful offerings for her enlargement.

March To Armory.

The entire morning hour will be devoted to the seminary's interest. The exercises will open with praise. The trustees and faculty and three hundred students will march from New York Hall at 8:30 o'clock this morning to the convention hall. Faculty and trustees will occupy seats on the platform, and addresses which shall be gathered up his observations and suggestions touching the denominational work at that particular time. His idea is that at least an hour ought to be set aside for this address, and that it ought to be one of the very best hours of the convention. ALUMNI BANQUET

At Galt House Attended by Over Two Hundred.

PRESIDENT OF GEORGETOWN COLLEGE MAKES ADDRESS.

SCHEME ON FOOT TO RAISE $100,000 ENDOWMENT.

HISTORY OF OLD INSTITUTION.

Over 200 members of the alumni of the Georgetown College and Female Seminary assembled at the banquet board at the Galt House last night to do honor to that noted and memorable institution. While there was none to represent the first class that was graduated from the ancient house of learning, for the college is now 80 years old, still there were a few who sat at the board whose birthdays date farther back than yesterday. Clark O. Smith, one of the best known business men in the city, a graduate of the class of 1855, was a lively chatterer about the board, and was much sought after by the younger alumni of the college. Judge J. S. Morris, of Lagrange, of the class of 1856, was present, looking as sprightly as a freshman. Dr. A. C. Davidson, of Covington, former president of the college and a graduate of 1851, was in attendance.

Among the most noted guests was the Rev. J. M. Frost, secretary of the Southern Baptist Sunday-school, of Nashville. He is a graduate of the class of 1869. The affair last night was the second of the kind that has been instituted by the present president of the college, Dr. Arthur Yager. The banquets are always held in Louisville. Dr. Yager brought a number of Georgetown people down with him to the banquet, among them being Holly Witherspoon, of Winchester, who was a graduate of the class of 1866. Dr. Yager said that the banquet was not altogether for the purpose of the alumni having a good time. While he wanted everybody to enjoy themselves, yet there was an undercurrent of business connected with the affair.

Has Bright Future.

In the first place Dr. Yager, who acted as toastmaster, told his hearers that the college now has a better future than it ever had. He said the fact of it being one of the oldest institutions of learning in this section did not mean that it had seen its best day. He said its best day was yet to come. With his fist clinched and with a swoop down on the table the speaker declared that there was a scheme on foot now in the shadows to raise a fund of $100,000 for the college and he might have to call on every one in the house to help raise the fund. There was a thunderous response in the way of a clapping of hands and with a nod of head which showed that all were ready to contribute their part if necessary.

Dr. Yager said that despite the fact that nearly every kind of disease raged about the town last year, the college came out all right and, in fact, in better shape than ever. Said he:

"Last year we had 287 students, which was a 10 per cent. increase over the year before. Despite the fact that the college has lost eleven professors within the last two years, I am glad to say that we have not got good instructors now. The same board that secured the eleven we lost can get more. Of course, the reason we lost those professors was that we could not afford to pay them more money, which they were entitled to. Our salaries of $1,500 a year were fixed many years ago. In those days it was a fair compensation, but now all expenses of living have greatly increased. One thing is true, other institutions of learning know where to get good professors when they are in need of them. We are not discouraged. Kentucky Baptists need an educational institution in this State of the type of the Georgetown College and for that reason it is going to live and keep abreast with the times."

Trustee Thomas Speaks.

Dr. Yager's address was well received. The invocation was delivered by the Rev. A. C. Davidson, former president of the college, but who now is a resident of Covington, Ky. The first speaker on the programme as arranged was the Rev. H. W. Virgin, of Jackson, Tenn., but he was unable to attend. The speaker whose address was the principal one of the evening was R. B. Thomas, of Georgetown, who is president of the board of trustees of the Georgetown College. He dwelt mainly on the upbuilding of the college. He said that no college in the country had a better chance for a better future before it than had Georgetown College. He spoke of the great men who have been educated at the school in years gone by and who are scattered all over the country. Said he:

"For eighty years Georgetown College has been making history. I know that some of the students have turned out bad, but the greater per cent. has turned out to be good citizens. We should always choose the good and leave the bad behind. Of course, we all like to steer to the beacon lights, but good lessons are often learned from the stranded derelicts. The college should forever receive the support of the Baptists of Kentucky."

Reviews History of College.

Clarence W. Wells, an attorney at the Owensboro bar, spoke on the subject "Nunc pro Tunc." The gist of his address was a review of the college from its beginning to the present age. Mr. Wells said that he was proud to be an alumnus of the institution, and he had never yet found a man who attended college there that was not proud of the fact. Mr. Wells represented the Pennyrile district at the banquet. He said that there were many alumni in the western part of the State who had received their education at the old Georgetown alma mater.

Dr. W. B. Crumpton, of Montgomery, Ala., and the Rev. C. C. Davidson, of Covington, Ky., and others, made short talks in praise of the college and expressing the hope that the ideals of President Yager will be realized at no distant day. Some good music was furnished by male quartet from the college.

The banquet was attended by women, and the banquet hall presented a most attractive sight. Good music was furnished and the menu was a most excellent one. The reception committee in charge of the banquet was as follows:

C. U. Smith, chairman; J. L. W. Slaughter, the Rev. J. S. Ransdale, Junius Caldwell, A. S. Rice, Miss Mary Lawrence Claxton, J. C. Bradley, Miss Jane R. Lewis, Dr. Bow, Dr. W. E. Gardner, Dr. H. B. Scott, W. H. Rowland, R. B. Thomas, Miss Mary Stevenson, Miss E. B. Withers.

EMMA EAMES IS SUED BY ELSA DE GOGORZA.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 14.—Suit was begun here to-day against Emma Eames, who is charged with alienating the affections of Emilo de Gogorza, a barytone in her company. The complainant is Elsa, his wife. The prima donna was served at the hotel where she is staying here prior to her departure for Europe. No statement has been filed and George Graham, Mrs. de Gogorza's attorney, declined to discuss the case.

Mayor Vetoes Equal Pay Bill.

New York, May 14.—Thousands of women school teachers in Greater New York received a shock to-day when Mayor McClellan repeated his action of last year in vetoing the so-called Equal Pay bill, a measure putting the salaries of the women teachers on an equal footing with those paid the men. In declining to approve the bill the Mayor said it would saddle an additional $17,000,000 burden on the city besides "disrupting the system of tutoring."

BAPTIST EDITORS

Enjoy Banquet At the Louisville Hotel.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP AND PLEASING TOASTS MARK OCCASION.

LACK OF SUPPORT OF RELIGIOUS JOURNALS COMMENTED ON.

MASS - MEETING SUGGESTED.

A delightful banquet was tendered to Baptist editors attending the Southern Baptist Convention at the Louisville Hotel by The Baptist World yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. It was pronounced by those present as one of the most enjoyable features of their visit to Louisville.

The occasion was one of great enjoyment and good-fellowship, and it will long be remembered by the many who were present. After the repast, several of the editors responded to toasts.

W. P. Harvey, toastmaster, in his opening address, told of the banquet which was held under similar auspices just ten years ago, when the Southern Baptist Convention was in session in Louisville. He also told of the trip which the editors had taken to Mammoth Cave on that occasion. He stated that although he was not able to make this a free trip, as before, he had arranged for everything except the railroad fare. The editors agreed to go again this year, and probably will go Monday and remain twenty-four hours. They will take trips through all three routes of the cave.

J. N. Prestridge, editor of The Baptist World, made the address of welcome. Mr. Prestridge said he had a good feeling toward every person in the world, and especially those seated around the banquet table. He stated further that his suggestion to the company was that they all remain in Louisville and join their efforts in making the greatest religious paper on earth.

J. S. Dickerson, editor of the Chicago Standard, was the next speaker of the evening. He, as a man representing the people of the North, complimented very highly the great work of the Southern religious press.

"The convention which is now being held in this city," said he, "is directly indebted to the body of men seated around this table for its success. Many attending the convention hardly realize how much the journalism of the church does in helping things along. The Southern press represents the brains of the church at large, and most all of the little matters which come up from time to time are settled by the papers."

He then said that he hoped to see the time when the Baptist journalism of the North will be closely linked with that of the South.

Veteran Editor Speaks.

T. P. Bell, who was spoken of as the father of religious journalism, followed with an amusing toast in the shape of several years ago he had resolved to make, in his editorials, a comment upon all of the more prominent editors of the papers. He said that after he had begun he found that he had before him a task which was great, that he would not have time to complete it. As a substitute for this he had in his mind an editor who had the composite qualities of all. This was an imaginary person, but he said that if he could, he would have the finest paper in all the land.

In describing the characteristics of this man he took the main qualities of most of the men present as factors in the genius he would make. He made John E. Pound one of the peculiarities of several of the men. His talk proved very witty throughout and was much enjoyed.

Victor Masters, of Atlanta, followed with a short, pointed address in regard to the lack of interest on the part of the pastors and laymen of the church in the church journals with which the editors labored day by day. He showed that only 700,000 out of 16,000,000 guests in the world subscribed to one or more of the publications gotten out by the church, while every one of them have their houses flooded with secular literature. He said that the time was ripe for a change, and suggested that several of those present help him in bringing this matter before the convention in a great mass meeting, in order to give the people an idea as to what is being done along that line. He voiced the sentiment of the entire gathering on this point and a mass meeting for this purpose probably will be held before the adjournment of the convention.

The final toast of the evening was given by J. Frank Norris, of Dallas, Tex.

"We, as Baptist editors, do not need to court the sympathy of anyone," said he. "We believe that the newspaper that has chosen the highest calling under heaven and work accordingly."

He ended by paying a tribute to the great fraternal spirit which exists between the members of the group and many others of a similar calling.

BOOKS AND THEIR WRITERS.

Lloyd Osbourne's Questionable Taste

A Novel of Real "Infatuation" In Which Truth Is Upset

There is something pathetic about a novel that has all the ingredients for greatness yet misses it. Mr. Osbourne begins his "Infatuation" with as fine a chance as ever novelist had; he presents the heroine, Phyllis, in a fashion that makes the reader gasp with delight; so rare is she, so original—her surroundings, her refinement, her exquisite taste, her shrinking from anything coarse or gross, her devotion to her father, going to build up an ideal heroine—that during the first chapters the critic asks himself whether at last he has not met the great American heroine. For she is not the fashionable, stuffed doll, but even in her waywardness something individual and fine.

It is all right that she should be captivated by the handsome, beast of a second-rate actor, Cyril Adair. The emotion here is truly described; it represents a common happening, a sort of revenge that Nature, ever jealous and zealous, takes on too many centuries of refinement. "Infatuation" is the proper term. Here it leads to a runaway, also not unusual.

Up to this point Mr. Osbourne treads surely. He has his great chance, but he fails. From the moment that Adair, though intending far other things, has made Phyllis his lawful wife, the author seems to try his best to transform her into a vulgar soubrette. He gives her the tricks of a light vaudeville performer. Here the sensitive, innocent shrinking girl immediately after the marriage ceremony, when she is driving away from the church that has given her a legal right to be with her second-rate actor, says:

"Just think, I could hug you right now before the driver and that old lady with the basket and that little boy blowing his baby brother's nose—and nobody could say boo!" She alarmed Adair by pretending to carry the hugging into effect until he pushed her away and bade her behave and she says—and all brides with really sensitive feelings will blush for her—

"Oh, but I'm married now, and can do just what I like and can have breakfast in bed with you every morning and put my shoes out with yours to be blacked—." The author adds:

"She exultantly popped up her feet on the seat in front, showing a shocking amount of black silk stocking with a bravado that made him grab at her skirt to pull it down; and in the ensuing romp there was more silk stocking still, and so much happy laughter on her part," etc.

Why a few words by a priest—who, by the bye, had no right to marry a divorced man—should have altered the whole nature of a refined, innocent girl, is hard to understand. Love for a scoundrel may do much, but the first hours of such a bride, one would think, would be anything but coarsely boisterous.

And as the book proceeds there are more of the sickening "'Oos 'ittle tootsey wootsey is 'oo?" episodes in shocking violation of married sanctity, and of artistic taste and reserve.

But this is not the worst. These two were fundamentally opposite. Their marriage was a succession of shocks to the girl. She discovered all that her husband had been and was—one cannot help thinking him a gross animal in every relation—but she only loves him the more. The reader can even pardon this disregard for the verisimilitudes, but the author rushes blindly into another vulgarity. When the pair is starving, the young girl, doing all the work, even to the washing and ironing, he makes this love of the young wife quicken the long-obscured conscience of the vulgar, low actor, who had never been anything but vulgar and low, and bring him up to the heights of self-sacrifice. The transformation is both displeasing and unnatural.

Then rushing blindly to the commonplace, the author drops a certain Mr. Rolls Reece from the skies, a great playwright, who has taken a notion that he wants to write a play, with the drunken Adair, whom managers hated and distrusted, for the great central figure; in other words to raise the pair from the depths to the top of the ladder, with wealth and fame thrown in.

Mr. Rolls Reece asks to bring a friend to see the Adairs, and although preferring an evening alone, he is granted permission, and ushers in—the millionaire father! Imagine him saying:

"I am here in the character of the repentant father with ashes on my head," said Mr. Ladd; and going up to Adair, held out his hand. "Will you forgive me?" he asked, "and may we not be friends?" Which one must admit was turning the other cheek with a vengeance.

Yes, the novel is well-named, but the infatuation is mostly the author's.

INFATUATION. By Lloyd Osbourne, author of "The Motormaniacs," "The Adventurer," etc. Published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

Lovely Irish "Katrine".

Not often does one encounter a more lovable or livable character than Mrs. Lane's warm-hearted Irish Katrine. From her sweet honesty as the overseer's daughter on a North Carolina plantation to her "divine forgetfulness on the night she was to sing at the Metropolitan," she is the same person—vivid, human, tender, impulsive, adorable.

Katrine loves and is loved by Francis Ravenel, of Ravanel mansion. This contra-type of King Cophetua informs her, after some indefinite love-making, that a man of his importance and training cannot contract a mesalliance. To make it "damnably clear," as he states it, he has no idea of marrying, and is preparing to leave her.

Young Katrine is splendidly courageous, her "head is bloody, but unbowed." When her father's death leaves her alone, the furniture and heirlooms are sacrificed to finance a journey to New York, where she longs to study music and forget sorrow in work.

Ravenel, however, arranges anonymously to send Katrine to Paris to study with Josef, "the greatest teacher in the world." While accepting this last statement is rather like trying to realize John Jones as the President of the United States, the reader loses no faith in Katrine's reality, even when the master tells her she has the greatest natural voice he has ever heard. For Katrine has the temperament which inherits great gifts and knows how to use them.

Another lover of Katrine, Dermott McDermott, a man of all the wit and generosity of Irish tradition, linked with Scot-like trift and subtlety, now takes affairs in hand and brings them to a point where, as he phrases it, "poetic justice gets on the job." But poetic justice is worsted by Celtic loyalty, and if the reader's faith fail not he may experience the thrill of seeing the world well lost when Melba's substitute forgets her engagement to sing in "Faust."

Mrs. Lane's fresh and sinewy style has lost nothing in this successor to "Nancy Stair," and the plot is similarly daring. The author has the Celtic gift of plausibility, which enables her to employ the unusual without seeming to touch the borders of unreason. A still more gracious trait is Mrs. Lane's faith and sympathy in character delineation. The aristocratic mother conquers her prejudice for her son's happiness, the drunkard father sacrifices his life to be cured of his weakness, the disappointed lover lies to shield his loved one's sweetheart. Which leaves nobody for villain except the reporter who exaggerates—and he is an Irishman.

KATRINE. A Novel. By Elinor Macartney Lane. Publishers, Harper & Bros., New York and London.

Uncle Gregory.

Once actually started one finds this rather an unusual novel, but it takes almost an unpardonable length of time to get started. In the first paragraph the teller of the story gets out of the train at Charing Cross, and it takes two whole chapters to get him into a cab and over to his club. In the meantime one is made acquainted, after a great deal of preamble, with the family history of Uncle Gregory, and in the third chapter the story starts off again. It is told by Uncle Gregory's great-nephew, the last male of the family of Rowley, and concerns the extraordinary will made by the recently deceased head of the family and the extraordinary efforts made by his heirs to carry out his wishes.

Uncle Gregory has accumulated a monumental trust to be used for his pet educational schemes, which the people do not hanker after. Although Uncle Gregory living does not appear upon the scene at all, yet his personality is, or was, such a powerful one that even in death he dominates family and friends. The development of his character is an exceedingly interesting study in human nature and is very well brought out by the novelist. Such a nature, so dominating, so calmly and unostentatiously tyrranical in the usurpation of every right of others, so monstrously certain that there is but one proper way and that his own, secure in the seat of judgment, needs his brother's words for description, "You make yourself the equal of God." There is a very slight love story but the maid interest surrounds Uncle Gregory, and he is worth knowing.

UNCLE GREGORY. By George Sandeman. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

New Shelburne Essays.

It should be a source of pride and pleasure to the American reader to take up a volume of Paul More's essays. In these grave green books, with white labels bearing the legend, "Shelburne Essays," one is sure to find such scholarship and such "high seriousness" in regard to books and the soul of man as augur well for the development of the reflective spirit in a country eminently acquisitive, but not sufficiently addicted to what a local philosopher has named "the bath of the soul"—meditation.

In the present series of essays, the sixth, Mr. More devotes himself to the study of Religious Dualism as represented by the Forest Philosophers of India, St. Augustine, Pascal, Sir Browne, Bunyan, Rousseau, Socrates and Plato. The names are significant of the range of the author's study which is apparently almost as much at home in Oriental and classic thought as in the more modern fields of analysis and speculation.

The essays all maintain a high standard of sustained thought and active critical faculty, but a few appeal with a peculiar charm. Among these latter may be mentioned the first one, "The Forest Philosophy of India," a fascinating resumé of that Hindu school of thought which, says the author, from the age of Alexander to the present has been the periodic wonder of the world. Mr. More thus sums that thought: "The illusion and the mutability of life are seldom mentioned, however they may lie on the background to the brightest picture. The substance of those books (of the Forest Philosophers) is the great and indomitable zest of a strong people groping for light; and through the seeking and the questioning there breaks now and then the supreme joy of one "who has found and knows what he has found."

Whether or not one entirely accepts all of Mr. More's views, the essay on Plato is a delight—being one of those happy instances of criticism where painter and subject are in that sympathy which conduces so largely to the success of the literary portrait. One of the author's paragraphs in this essay begins: "The real Platonism, then, is not a dogmatic statement of the truth, but a continuous approximation thereto which for us, as we are constituted, is more veracious than truth; it is not a metaphysic, but a discipline." The words are a key to Mr. More's fine quality as a student and thinker, a clew to his ardor for the quest of truth, his valiant acceptance of the fact that for the most part that quest is an approximation, a discipline and yet withal a fine adventure despite the difficulties, the innumerable illusions and disillusions of the way.

Not the least impressive note of Mr. More's work is a pervading evidence that he has grappled with these difficulties and shows of things, the dragons in the path for him who broods over the past, present and future of human life. As he says of someone else, "he is a light-hearted optimist." And yet one lays down his book stimulated to adventure into the infinite fields of thought, it made also most keenly conscious of what weariness, what bafflements attend that flight.

Both in his quality of thought and manner not infrequently is Mr. More reminiscent of Arnold—especially Arnold the poet. In comparison with his "light-hearted optimists," which one suspects is euphemism for the frivolous, Mr. More's touch recalls what Swinburne said of that quality in Arnold which scorned to disregard human doubts and the "eternal note of sadness." Of Mr. More, likewise, it may be maintained that to the maturer minds his autumnal touch, as it "tempers excessive light and suffuses refluent shade," is more convincing than the "violence of summer and winter in which others detain us." Not that Mr. More will convince all his readers—and yet, even to those who do not agree with him, it is significant that America has produced this essayist and critic who can engage the attention of the serious-minded.

To those who are interested more in the literary side of things than in the philosophical the essays on Sir Thomas Browne and Plato are recommended.

SHELBURNE ESSAYS. Sixth series. By Paul Elmer More. Publishers, G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

Self-Measurement.

A scale of human values with directions for personal application. The author, Mr. De Witt Hyde, prepared this volume as a lecture before the People's Institute of the Cooper Union. He does not claim that his assertions are proved, rather that he has put them in the form of questions to be decided by the reader. Criticising the work from this point of view will give some rather alarming light on one's own shortcomings.

Taking, for instance, his table giving a "Scale of Human Values" and conscientiously marking it the reader will be self-convicted on every count. Who is not at some stage of the game of life idle, shiftless, depressed, ignorant, insensible, neglectful, selfish, indifferent and disbelieving? Even on the line No. 7 marked "Perversive" one must acknowledge guilt, while on that last terrible No. 3, "Destructive," with its murder, waste, theft, cynicism, falsehood, defacement, hatefulness, malice, anarchy, blasphemy, one can have committed all these crimes either in (or out) of the heart.

Of far less sureness is the decision on the top of the scale, where creative, productive and receptive characteristics are to be gauged. "Patriotism and Propagation" sound well together, but seem rather out of place on the same line with "affection and hospitality, scholarship and skill."

There are seventy-five pages of probing questions, which, if answered truthfully, will offer a Bertillon guide to self-knowledge even though it may riddle soul and body.

SELF-MEASUREMENT. A Scale of Human Values With Directions For Personal Application. By William DeWitt Hyde, president of Bowdoin College. In The Art of Life Series. Published by B. W. Huebsch, New York.

The World's Triumph.

A poetic play with much ideality in it and poetic feeling in atmosphere and line. The drama is cast in the Fourteenth century, the Duke of Modena being the central character. But the significance of the play is based on ideas perhaps more current to-day than in mediaeval Modena—the spirit of human fraternity being the author's thesis.

An ominous cloud hangs over Modena as the play opens. Various interpretations of the portent are given. An Eastern astrologer, an Italian monk, and other counsellors endeavor to say what the sign in the heaven signifies and how the evil it portends shall be averted. The young duke knows not what to do, and meantime the populace, growing rebellious, wishes his abdication. Finally there comes to him a girl, something of a Joan of Arc, a mountain girl who has had visions:

"Whose tender accents breathe of the fresh fields and the clear mountains passes."

But she does not come armed with a sword to help his battles! She comes with peace. The duke loves her and by wedding her—this simple peasant girl, one of the people—the rebellious people are appeased; for the need has been that "love of all mankind should come to rule mankind" and that power should

"Give itself to those that are its props
And the dumb eyeless masses have for help
The insight of the noblest; thus be life,
Which now is shattered in a mortal mad divorce,
Healed wondrously with deeper, finer strength."

The chief fault of the play is that the speeches are too long. If these had been condensed and more glowing beauty infused into the lines the play seized the fancy more persuasively.

THE WORLD'S TRIUMPH. By Louis James Block. J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia.

Fraternity.

On two points the author has violated the code of book-making ethics, his beginning is not specially good, and his conclusion is not a conclusion at all. The last point is true, however, only on the surface, and the volume is filled, full measure and over, with good things of such unusual quality that one would readily pardon far graver faults than a slightly incoherent first chapter, especially as that first chapter itself has the same unique phrasing which is a great part of the charm that belongs to the later chapters.

"Word painting" is rather a wornout designation to apply to the vivid arrangement of sentences and phrases by which this author succeeds in putting fresh life into the dry bones of everyday English. At times his style is almost epic in its simplicity, again it becomes an etching with a thousand fine lines full of subtle meaning of light and shade, and the chapter "The Funeral of a Baby" is a wonderful combination of the two. The book deals with the social problem as it affects all ranks, from the view point of a number of people totally unlike one another. One of them, a suare-jawed young doctor fighting among the squalor and misery of the very poor, gives his view: "We've gone past the need for sentiment. When you see a dying donkey in a field, you don't want to refer the case to a society, as your dad would; you don't want an essay of your uncle Hilary's full of sympathy with everybody, on 'Walking in a field; with reflections on the end of donkeys.' You want to put a bullet in the donkey." His young cousin, a tenderhearted girl with the fragrant name of Thyme, tries to help Martin put the bullet in the donkey, but her spirit fails her, she longs for beauty and grace and love and music, and she turns shrinkingly from the sordid life she has tried to ameliorate.

The characterizations throughout are genuine creations, especially Hilary Dallison, the Twentieth century Hamlet, negative yet with a conscience that urges him to action, refined to a high delicacy yet beneath it a man with a man's passion. The old father, babbling of Brotherhood, philosophizing on Fraternal Love, blind and deaf to all the insistent life about him, is a striking figure, the little model an intensely human one. The whole conception is delicate yet powerful, gripping one with its subtlety and the breadth of its vision.

FRATERNITY. By John Galsworthy. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

Story of the Great Lakes.

A most interesting story of the marvelous development of the Great Lakes country. The authors have not made an exhaustive chronicle of the several interesting periods that have made the history of this wonderful section of the United States, but they have recorded such important events as have been significant during the 300 years that have elapsed since the days of early exploration to these of such active industrial, political and commercial developments. The authors are so impassioned over their theme they are not willing to pause here in their admirations of what has been accomplished around this system of great lakes — the philanthropy emanating from Hull House; the music and art and education fostered in Chicago, Detroit, and similar achievements along cultural lines—social, aesthetic and intellectual—point the moral, say the authors; that the lake cities are recognized not only as leading factors in our prosperity, centers for the evolution and distribution of great wealth and natural resources, but centers also whence "great leaders, great policies and great ideals will come forth, making the lake region a force to be reckoned with and depended upon in the future of the nation."

THE STORY OF THE GREAT LAKES. By Edward Channing and Marion F. Lansing. Publishers, the Macmillan Co., New York.

Laws of Friendship.

As all Dr. King's work, this little volume on friendship is pitched to a high note of idealism. He recalls that beautiful old advice Cicero gave in his De Amicitia, which practically said that whoever desires a friend must make himself that which he desires in another—then will the two bright flames approach each other and become one.

Integrity, breadth and depth of personality; community of interests; mutual self-revelation, self-giving, and trust are among the necessities for a good basis of friendship, insists Dr. King in one of his earlier chapters, and to this basis he repeatedly refers.

Hence it can be seen that a high order of human relation is set forth, one founded on no superficial charm nor purely emotional impulse; one built rather on abiding qualities of heart, character and intellect, which help to bind human association into the highest spiritual relationship, this last being a recurrent note in Dr. King's chapters.

RAILROAD PROMOTION AND CAPITALIZATION IN THE UNITED STATES. By Frederick A. Cleveland, Ph. D., and Fred Wilbur Powell, A. M. Longmans, Green & Co., New York City.

Lord Bacon furnishes the opening text for this author in citing his opinions that the three elements necessary to make a nation great and prosperous were a fertile soil, busy workshops and easy conveyance of men and things from one place to another.

It has taken a long time for the world to appreciate the enormous part the question of transportation plays in its most vital business problems. After the Revolution, the question of land transportation was for the first time considered. Washington in a letter to Benjamin Harrison, then Governor of Pennsylvania, impressing upon him the necessity for binding all parts of the Union together, predicted that once the difficulty, offered by unimproved roads, rendering transportation of industrial products impossible being overcome, there would be close commercial relations between Spain, Great Britain and the Union. "Smooth the road, and make the way easy for them and then see what an influx of articles will be poured upon us; how amazingly our exports will be increased by them, and how amply we shall be compensated for any trouble and expense we may encounter to effect it."

The first turnpike company organized in 1785, between Alexandria and the Lower Shenandoah, was really an epoch, but in reading the history recorded between that and the first railroad one realizes how slow and painful was the progress.

The authors says that the current belief that Stephenson's "Rocket" was the first steam locomotive is erroneous. Many locomotives had preceded this historical back number and railways had been in use for more than a century. At first they were only used in mines but as the rails themselves evolved from crude wooden pieces to iron with flanges, the function of the rail became unlimited.

All these preliminary chapters are of intrinsic interest as carefully considered history; the bulk of the volume, however, is devoted to discussions of questions affected by railrad transportation and the methods of promoting, financiering and operating the roads. Various chapters treat of State funding of transportation enterprises, rivalry between trade centers in its relation to promotion and capitalization, private companies, reconnaissance and surveys, legislative provisions, methods of obtaining financial support, subsidies of various kinds, trans-continental roads, etc.

WRITING THE SHORT STORY. By J. Berg Esenwein, A. M., Lit. D., editor of Lippincott's Monthly Magazine, author of "How To Attract and Hold An Audience." Published by Hinds, Noble & Eldredge, New York.

The first demand the short story insists upon is for what the author calls totality of effect. A novel cannot be read at a sitting, but as a short story generally fills in the idle hour it must be entirely and intrinsically different from a novel. A condensed novel is never a short story.

The author first tells what a short story is not. It is not an episode, nor a scenario or synopsis, nor a biography, nor a sketch; it is not even a tale (though here the critics will differ). It is something different from all these, being marked by seven characteristics. These the young writer will do well to commit to memory, for they embrace the sum and substance of the short story proper. They are: A single predominating incident; a single pre-eminent character, imagination, plot, compression, organization, unity of impression. That difficult thing, a definition is attempted with rather better result than usual:

"A short-story is a brief, imaginative narrative, unfolding a single predominating incident and a single chief character. It contains a plot, the details of which are so compressed, and the whole treatment so organized, as to produce a single impression."

The author then takes the short-story in all its multiplicity of detail and arranges it technically in a series of lessons dealing with the form, the conception, development, and the more practical details of its preparation and sale.

OH! CHRISTINA! By J. J. Bell. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

In this little story the author of Wee MacGregor has returned to the manner of his first success, and very happily too. Christina is a very real little girl, 12 years old, who comes to live with her maiden aunt, a gentle and ladylike little woman to whom Christina's slang and boisterous ways are a sore trial. Miss Purvis keeps a small shop and runs it in her own genteel and dignified way, but Christina is of the opinion that she herself could run that shop in a much more businesslike manner, she interviews the drummer, orders new goods, demands a discount on her bill, and does a great stroke of business by selling a copy of yesterday's paper after having sold out the day's. Perched on a step-ladder she calls down, "Mind yer tut, auntie! I'm goan to drap this yin!" She follows Miss Carvey and a young gentleman three miles through the wood in order to hear him propose, she calls Mr. Baldwin "Mr. Baldyin," "because he is a bald yin!" and she does other inimitable stunts in such a healthy, cheerful, perfectly natural way that one enjoys her like a tonic. There is none of the strained effort so apparent in Mr. Bell's longer novels, and the illustrations are so delightful that one wishes there were more of them.

DAYBREAK IN KOREA. By Annie L. A. Baird. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

Korean customs and family life are the subject of this story, which is built up around the life of Pobal, introduced in the first chapter as a little 12-year-old Korean girl with a fat baby strapped upon her back, who becomes the unwilling bride of a little boy of 10 and is carried away to the distant home of his parents, where she slaves incessantly for her two meals a day and a sleeping room at night. She angers her husband by bearing him a girl child, but at his death she loses even the slight protection which his presence afforded her. She is sold to another husband, her child dies of the plague, finally she becomes acquainted with the American missionaries and learns of the new religion. The story is interesting, the little incidents of Korean life are faithfully rendered, perhaps the general conversion in the end is a little overdone, everybody Christianized and made noble and lovable to a degree not often attained even by the best of American Christians.

THE DIARY OF A SHOW GIRL. By Grace Luce Irwin. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York.

Born in Paris, Ohio, with no experience except that of washing ma's back windows and officiating behind the spool counter in a dry goods store, Minnie Higgins begins her career as a show girl with the "Babes in Woodland," and keeps a diary to register her sensations on the way to fame. A very amusing diary it is, slangy, naive and redolent of the footlights. "Oh, I love the click of your little wooden shoes, on the tiles of Amsterdam," is the song on which she wings her way toward starship. She dances, too, and gets a vicious push from a jealous rival. "Here you, Higgins! You pay attention after this. And pull up your stockings! They mustn't wrinkle," the owner of the show yells and starts her tears. Her little adventures, her suppers at Sherry's and at Rectors, where she sweeps in like a Queen of Song, "my jewels was just one old rhinestone buckle, but I swept just the same," her love affair with Mr. Harry Hopper, and her ups and downs with the other chorus girls, all are faithfully written out in her own unique and funny little way with considerable art in its very frankness.

PARTNERS THREE. By Victor Mapes. Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.

In its style and arrangement this is rather an unusual story, also the denouement is quite out of the ordinary. It is told by Patrick Isaac Ennis, alias No. 343, alias P. I. E., or Pie, and is so simply and naturally written that it appears to be a record of actual facts rather than fiction. The three partners are the Doctor, Tony and Pie. The Doctor is a person one would be delighted to meet in real life, "joy and health and humor seemed to fill his being to the brim and at the slightest provocation they would bubble over." Nothing disturbed his temper or ruffled his cheerfulness; indeed, the big, hearty fine-souled doctor would be too perfect for a real man, except that he is given one bad fault, rather inconsistent with the balance of his personality, however. His wards are the boy, Pie, taken from the House of Refuge, where he had been sent for counterfeiting, and the girl, Tony, a friendless orphan, picked up in the Swiss Alps. The life of these three is a record of simpleity and high living and mutual love, and is well told by Pie, who reveals himself as that rare creature, a human being grateful to the last gasp and faithful to the last drop of blood in his body. The love affair and the accompanying mystery must not be explained here, but shall be left to the pen of Pie.

OUR VILLAGE. By Joseph C. Lincoln. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

The delightful sketches herein contained have a homelikeness that appeals with the pathos of things slipped into the past forever. The titles themselves bring back memories, "Our House," "The School Picnic," "Teacher," "Our Oldest Inhabitant," "A Cape Cod Clambake" tells of a happy seashore picnic with Uncle Seth as leader of the clam diggers; Aunt Tempy superviser of the tablecloth brigade, and the green city man as the candidate for initiation into the delights of a real old-fashioned clambake. "Our House" is described until one sees its settin' room and the airtight stove, its big dining-room with the west windows full of fuchsias and begonias, its best spare room with the fathoms-deep featherbed and the funeral wreaths, dipped in wax, adorning the walls, hears its seldom-used front-door bell, "Clank, r-r-rattle! Ding-Dong!" smells its gingerbread and its doughnuts and its cookies. 'The Old Maids" tells of Miss Pashy and Miss Huldy, and the romance and tragedy and dullness that followed each other in their lives, and "A Christmas Memory," well it is a Christmas memory of a boy's long ago childhood and what grampa and gramma did for him. They are sketches of New England life.

THE CHIPPENDALES. By Robert Grant. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

Boston is the scene, source, and inspiration of this novel of modern life. Its characters are various types of Bostonians, its contrasted ideals Bostonian even in their differences. In the early eighties a young man comes to Boston "to seek his fortune." He is alert, good-humored, confident, "a victim neither to dyspepsia nor self-distrust." Deliberately he chooses which of two stepsisters will make him the most satisfactory wife, buys the ring, and goes to propose to her—and is accepted. Opposite Blaidsdell stands Henry Chippendale Sumner, a native Bostonian, descendant of generations of Bostonians and representative of all the exclusiveness of "the water side of Beacon street and the sunny side of Commonwealth avenue." Sumner is hampered by the genuine New England conscience which interferes on all occasions with practical common sense and even with romance. This last becomes to Priscilla Avery the unforgiveable offence, this extreme conscientiousness which cannot allow a man to forget his duty and himself even at the height of romantic emotion. The Chippendales are finely drawn, most of them standing out as distinct personalities. The chapterter in which a reporter, calling upon the Chippendales for an expression regarding their family skeleton, is handled first by the father and then by the son, is one of the keenest in the whole book. There is throughout a lack of emotion, the book is too even in tone, it strikes one disagreeably to have the death of one of the principal characters announced quite casually in the midst of a couple of sentences about something else. However, there is no doubt of its vividness as character study and interpretation of national tendencies.

THE GYPSY COUNSEL. By May Wynne. The John McBride Co., New York.

Love, with the additional glamor of the romantic environment of long ago, is always a subject that can be wound entertainingly around a slight plot. In the year of grace, 1483, in Brittanny lived a gallant soldier, Alain de Fougeray, and his saucy, beautiful little sister, the Lady Rosalys; her lover, Maurice de Bernay, to whom she has consented to be betrothed to foil a wicked scheme, and a certain masterful young gypsy, Tristan, who has come into the forest, accompanied by his mad mother. The lives of these four and that of Yvonne, sister of De Bernay, are woven about one another in quite a readable tale of love and adventure, mystery and romance. The plot is old, quite old, and children stolen by revengeful gypsies have long lost their novelty, yet otherwise the story is well told. De Fougeray and De Bernay are brave noblemen, who do not hesitate to penerate into the lonely and isolated Chateau de Malgin to rescue an innocent prisoner or to do other daring deeds, and in the end the true lovers are united, although one of the company is forced to go sadly upon his lonely way. It is a pretty story of slightly formal wording, and moves smoothly.

THE REVELATION TO THE MONK OF EVESHAM. By Velerian Paget. The John McBride Co., New York.

"In the year of Our Lord, eleven hundred and ninety-six, concerning the places of Purgatory and Paradise, rendered into modern English by Valerian Paget," so says the title page, and after a preface and a prologue, the chronicle relates the story of the unknown Monk of Evesham, who "soon after his conversion fell ipto a grievous sickness, and for fifteen months was afflicted with great bodily weakness." On Good Friday the brothers found the sick monk prostrate before the abbot's seat, apparently lifeless. He lay in this trance for two days, then revived and related how St. Nicholas, his holy patron saint, had appeared and led him through Purgatory and Paradise, where he saw the damned undergoing punishment and the blessed enjoying their wrondrous privileges. All this he relates in detail, together with many life stories of those he sees in his visions. The book corresponds in dress to its subject matter.

FAME'S PATHWAY. By H. C. Chatfield-Taylor. Duffield & Co., New York.

The central figure of the book is Moliere, who appears first as the young law student, Jean Baptiste Poquelin, watching from the pit the beautiful actress, Madeleine Bejart, in the midst of her sorry company on the roughly improvised stage of the tennis court. It is love at first sight with the two, and one reads on of Madeleine's trials and troubles, of Jean Baptiste's quarrel with his respectable father, of his struggle for recognition on the stage, of the production of his play, "The Jealousy of Smutty Face," of the flinging of apples that marked his appearance in "Charles, the Bold," of Madeleine's devotion and faithfulness. Moliere was far from faithful on his part, but he is always made to appear the dupe of a designing woman, and he invariably in the end recognizes the true worth of Madeleine. Some of the shrewish female members of Madeleine's troupe are constantly fighting her and each other with tongue and sometimes with nails. Many of the famous personages of the day appear upon the pages from time to time, and Madeleine Bejart is shown unselfishly loving and loyal to the end. The book is illustrated with numerous pictures by Comte de Breville.

A New Novel By the Author of "The Wood-Carver of 'Lympus"

A YEAR OUT OF LIFE

By MARY E. WALLER

"A sound narrative and one of haunting emotional beauty; a story to be read without haste, and reverently received."—[Chicago Evening Post.

"Now and then we come across a story that seems a veritable human document, the transcription of actual feelings, or the record left upon a heart by a series of events that were momentous in one life. Such a book is Mary E. Waller's 'A Year Out of Life.' It would take but little persuasion to convince one that some sweet woman whom we knew had written a year of her life. The fragrance of it still clings, it is a pleasant memory to the reader, as it must have been to the woman herself."—[Chicago Tribune.

"The letters—only those written by the man are published—are literary gems, and in their construction lies the exquisite art of Miss Waller. They will take rank alongside of other famous literary correspondence." — [Springfield (Mass.) Union.

WHERE POETS STARVE TO DEATH.

Fiery Roast of England By Its Chief Remaining Poet—William Watson Says John Davidson Died Because He Couldn't Make a Living—News and Gossip of American Interest in London Literary Circles.

London, April 28.—William Watson, who, since Swinburne's death, is perhaps the best living poet left to England, has just written a remarkable letter concerning the mysterious disappearance, and undoubted suicide, of his brother-poet, John Davidson, who has passed, "almost unremarked," as Watson says, "to his strange and lonely death, as real a singer, when he sang his best, as the great and famous veteran who has just died amid a tempest of praise."

It is a fiery attack that Watson makes on British indifference to its poets, and considering Poe's fate perhaps we Americans may apply some of it to ourselves. At any rate, it makes "live" reading. "This episode—in the literary history of England"—continues Mr. Watson, "is one more addition to the long list of tragedies which we may consider as beginning with the death of Spenser 'for lack of bread' (if Ben Jonson's words are to be trusted), and which emphatically did not end with the death of Chatterton in his miserable garret, murdered by the editors who had accepted his contributions and paid for them at the rate of eight pence for a poem and one shilling for an article. For let there be no mistake about it—John Davidson died because he could not make a living.

"Let me say at once—and I trust no one will be so base as to suppose that I say it from any ungenerous motive—that I attach little importance to his latter work as a poet. The thought in it was often crude; the voice in it was often strained and hoarse. But whose fault was this? It was the fault primarily of the so-called 'public' and the critics who are perpetually demanding from a poet an 'output' (that I believe is the beautiful word that is commonly employed) such as no artist can produce without doing murderous violence to his powers and his artistic conscience.

"Let it, then, be freely acknowledged that Davidson had exhausted himself long before his last volume saw the light. None the less, this was a man who, notwithstanding all the crudity of his later thinking, all the resentment against society and fate, which made much of his utterances so turbid, was yet a creature with something of the divine fire in him—something of the infernal fire as well, which also we need in a poet.

"The Davidson tragedy, it must in candor be admitted, is one of a class in which we English—and also our Scottish neighbors, when one comes to think of Burns—have attained to a somewhat unenviable eminence. When, if ever, are these tragedies to cease? It is to be feared that we shall never be quite without poets; and if the popular apathy regarding them goes on increasing—if the intellectual life of the nation becomes more and more swamped by money-making, athletics, and the devotion of grown men to boys' games—the poet's tragedy is likely to happen with increased frequency. One does not wish one's country to become a byword for that sort of thing. Narrowing one's outlook for the moment to literature alone, it would appear that fiction is the only form of it which retains any power of effective appeal to the popular intelligence. I suppose there are fifty paltry novelists who make anything from a £1,000 to £2,000 a year, but it is as possible as it was in the early days of Samuel Johnson for a genius capable of conferring luster on any age or country to live in obscurity and cruel neglect and to die at last of the accumulated fury of a lifetime—as John Davidson died."

Mr. and Mrs. Cale Young Rice sail for home to-day after a prolonged tour abroad. Mrs. Rice, as the author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," is almost as much of a celebrity in England as in America, but although she and her husband were overwhelmed with invitations, they were able to stay in London less than a week. Both looked well and happy when I went to call upon them on Sunday, but they were evidently anxious to set foot on American soil again and couldn't even wait to see if Mrs. Rice's new novel, "Mr. Opp," which comes out here this week, gets a kind reception. They will stay in New York a few days, and then go on to their beloved Louisville. They paid a visit in Florence last week to Eva Madden, another of the Louisville literary coterie. Mr. Rice has another poetic drama in hand, and are in conference with some of the London managers concerning it.

James Montgomery Flagg isn't the only author in the Flagg family. The artist's father, Elisha Flagg, head of the American Express Company's foreign department, and probably better known to American tourists than any other man in London, besides being a personal friend to most of the American colony here, has blossomed out into literature with a "Travelers' Guide." Mr. Flagg modestly conceals his authorship, but the secret is herewith revealed. His book isn't fiction, but its array of facts as to what it costs to get to the uttermost parts of the earth, as well as to other parts almost as fascinating, is enough to set the imagination soaring. And what more can you ask of literature? The author's style, being devoted chiefly to tables, can best be described as terse and pointed.

"Printer's Ink," a publication familiar in every newspaper office in America, has just branched out into an English edition, containing some of the contents of the American edition, together with much new material of especial interest to English readers. The Times refers to this new American enterprise as being "well-written and business-like."

A NEW NOVEL BY JAMES LANE ALLEN.

The most important fiction announcement of the year is the statement that James Lane Allen has written a new novel which is to be published in June. For the past six years no book by the author of "The Choir Invisible" has been given to the public, much of his time having been devoted to the forthcoming story. The Macmillan Company is to bring out the novel.

ELUSIVE ISABEL

The Speeding Arrow of a Brilliant Tale

The romance of mystery is here carried to its utmost reach. A vast international conspiracy springs the element of bewilderment; a conspiracy in which the Latin races are combined against the Anglo-Saxon. A beautiful young woman, of secret eminence, works with amazing cleverness to bring about the Latin alliance. Opposed to her is a young American of the Secret Service.

Mr. Futrelle is a magician. You're puzzled and baffled and enticed and captivated by the legerdemain of the masterly mystery-maker. It all happens at Washington, "the drawing-room of the nation," and in the diplomatic set. Pictures by Alonzo Kimball.

SATURDAY.....MAY 15, 1909

"Business."

Friday Evening, May 14.—After ruling strong in the first hour, the New York stock market became easier and broke rather sharply in the afternoon, and, while closing at a recovery from the low, was still materially off from yesterday.

Money on call was easy at 1¾ to 2 per cent., ruling at 1¾. Time loans were a shade easier and fairly active at 2¾ to 3¾. Sterling exchange was strong.

The Chicago wheat market was firm most of the day, closing a shade lower to 1c higher. Corn and oats were easy and provisions strong.

The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 3 to 9 points, ruled active and feverish, with an upward tendency, and closed a few points higher.

The Chicago cattle market was steady, the hog market strong and the sheep market weak.

"Henry Waterson is already predicting Democratic success in 1912. It is in the interest of the people that President Taft veto the tariff bill, but it is in the interest of the Democratic party that he sign it. Because on this issue the Democrats can win. Let the people once realize that the Republican pledges of revision were pie-crust promises, and since the policy of protection is a pickpocket policy, the Democrats will be enabled to make a grand campaign, with the eighth commandment as the principal issue."—[Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

Nay, nay, old man, not so fast. He is "predicting" nothing. Nor has he uttered any word about 1912. That is away off. Three years sometimes become a generation in American politics. What the Courier-Journal did say was that the Democrats have a living chance to carry the next National House of Representatives. At Washington the Republicans are nearly as badly off, altogether as split among themselves and all at sea as the Democrats seem to be over the country at large. Whether the Democrats are able to pull themselves together by 1912, and, upon a united Tariff-for-revenue only issue whether they can win a Presidential battle, remains to be seen. There are forces within the Democratic fold tugging the other way. It is too early to speculate. But, as matters are going at Washington, it looks that in the general elections of next year, 1910, we may be able to pick off enough of the Republican candidates for re-election, seriatim, to make a Democratic majority in the Sixty-first Congress.

Disgusting.

Seventeen Democrats of the Senate join the Aldrich protection extremists in voting to retain a tariff on iron ore.

Seventeen Democrats of the Senate vote for a duty of 25 cents a ton on iron ore, though even a Republican House of Representatives voted to place iron ore on the free list.

Heinrich Conried's Funeral.

The spirit of Heinrich Conried, gazing from the distant mists, must have derived comfort and exaltation from the funeral service arranged over the mortal flesh which it had left behind. Out of 10,000 persons who had tickets of admission to the service in the great Operahouse only 3,000 could get into the building to join in the tribute to the departed. Never before was funeral like it. In times past there have been dazzling spectacles in honor of the dead; there have been regal pomp and circumstance, long lines of marchers, sounds of martial music from the brass throats of many instruments, uniforms, banners of mourning, all typifying earthly show and marked by external display. Not so in the case of Heinrich Conried. The impresario had not dwelt in serenity at the head of the Metropolitan Operahouse, but there was serenity in this last moment. There was the serenity of his ended toil, his mute lips, his stilled heart; but there was also the serenity of great music, swelling from grand orchestra and world-great voice. As the multitude bowed their heads the orchestra of 135 artists played the sweetly solemn measures of Beethoven's funeral march, with its indescribable utterance of melancholy. Boys' voices chanted the spiritual notes of that uplifting temple scene of "Parsifal," which Conried himself had brought first to American shores. And the stately harmonies of Handel's Largo and the poignant beauties of Chopin's Marche Funebre arose in the vast hall and sighed through the hearts of those present. There could not have been a more appropriate service for an impresario of Conried's achievements. There could not have been conceived a more effective way of glorifying both the dead and death.

The Plain and Real Issue.

I.

Says the Augusta, Ga., Chronicle:

"Henry Watterson, in reply to a friend and war comrade, refuses to concede that to excessive liquor drinking alone is attributable most of the crimes of the day; nor will he admit that to liquor is attributable more of crime than to other causes."

This is wholly inexact. He did not refuse to concede that "to excessive liquor drinking alone is attributable most of the crimes of the day." It should go without saying that the greatest curse known to man, now and ever, has been, and is, excessive drinking. To none other single source can so many evils be traced. Mr. Watterson did declare that "there are many vices which arise out of our frail humanity and afflict society which cannot be ascribed to this cause;" but that was not to say, that, eliminating intoxicants from the world, we shall not begin to approach the perfect state of man. The Editor of the Courier-Journal goes thus far with his prohibition critics.

In the following, however, our esteemed Georgia contemporary quotes and construes him correctly:

"Mr. Watterson holds that drinking to excess is confined to a very small percentage of every community, and contends that of late years there has been a steady diminishing of the drink habit, due to the better enlightenment of men. In the Latin countries, such as are Spain, France and Italy, drunkenness as common in the United States is substantially unknown. In Germany, where beer is the national beverage, there is no such thing as drunkenness of the kind so fatally familiar to America. But, in Maine, sixty years of drastic prohibition have not sufficed to extinguish drunkenness or regenerate the people, as a matter of fact, this long term of prohibition in Maine has brought into being a retinue of evils never before known, although inevitable to the effort to control by legislative enactment the 'appetites and individual liberties of the people.'"

To the maintenance, as truth and fact, of each of these propositions, the Courier-Journal holds itself answerable.

For what all-wise purpose the good Lord put strong drink before man, is as inexplicable as for what all-wise purpose he placed disease and sin and death before him. Why is not health "catching," why is not virtue epidemic? We know not. We must deal with the world as we find it and as it is. That and that alone is wisdom.

The Doctors are dealing slowly, but, as we hope and believe, surely, with disease. In the end, Science will have discovered in Nature an antidote for every poison, and, barring the accidents of flood and field, mortals will wear out their lives and die at last of inanition. The Preachers are dealing adequately with the spiritual side of man, not only teaching him Christ and Him crucified if they be orthodox, but seeking under every religious system to educate his moral nature, to moderate his desires and to make him in his walks and ways an imitator of the God-man exemplified by Jesus of Nazareth, the Immortal Jew. It is left for the Prohibitionist, to make hell on earth, to take man by the scruff of his neck and the seat of his breeches and to fling him heels over head into Kingdom Come, regenerate by Act of Assembly; to convert the drunken and wasteful brute into a model citizen, at once a fond and frugal head of household, by making it harder for him to get his accustomed dram; in short, to establish the New Jerusalem by converting the open saloon into a blind tiger, appointing every other man his brother's keeper, ordaining the spy system as the chief arm of the law and putting a premium upon official dishonesty.

This it is which we contest. We would contest it even if drunkenness were more pronounced than it is, agreeing, though but tentatively agreeing, with the English prelate who said: "Rather England free than England sober," for we would have America both free and sober, as it measurably is, because they who drink to excess constitute a very small proportion of each community, and, with the visionary and doubtful purpose of reaching them, we would not establish despotism. We prefer the slower, surer methods of the Doctors and the Preachers, which are everywhere making good progress. They are everywhere making good progress, except in those regions to which fanaticism and fraud—the tricky and cowardly politician joined with the self-exploiting preacher, to promote a crazy scheme of Prohibition that does not prohibit—have introduced the reign of hatred and pelf, have set up the standards of the Star Chamber and the Inquisition, have invited the smuggler, the adulterator and the informer; that is, in Maine for sixty years; in Iowa, whilst Prohibition lasted, for ten; in Georgia for two; and to-day, in Tennessee and Alabama, where the doctrine is taught that, "if thy neighbor offend thee, confiscate his property," and, if this will not suffice, "burn him at the stake."

We refuse to subscribe to any such gospel for any purpose; least of all, to reach the inebriate, who, save in the lands of Mohamet, has always found means to reach his bottle; gets it as surely, if not as easily, in Maine as ever he did; in Georgia, in spite of the obvious motive to keep drink from the Negro; as witness these concluding remarks of the Augusta Chronicle:

"We know now, down here in Georgia, that prohibition does not prohibit. We cannot draw a lesson in the matter from our own city of Augusta, for it has never been hoped that there would be prohibition of consumption of liquor at this point. The fact that there is the legal sale of liquor 200 yards from the city limits—in the adjoining State of South Carolina—is testimony that those who enacted the prohibition laws did not hope to bring about a halt in the drinking of liquor in this city. But we have the testimony of towns that are not similarly situated, geographically, that the prohibition laws have not resulted in putting a stop to liquor drinking. Kentucky may pass all the laws against 'demon rum' that she wishes, but she will not be able to enforce prohibition of consumption any more than has Georgia, Maine or the other States that have enacted statutes of this sort."

II.

Turn we from Georgia, where they have had two years of it, lowering the political without elevating the moral standards, to Tennessee where the combine of the dishonest politician and the bigoted preacher, making strange bedfellows, is yet aglow with the light of the new religion of hate and fraud, the new partyism of hide-and-seek.

It will surely bring to Tennessee in the end nothing but bitterness and woe, as it has already brought tragedy and blood. But, can it be possible that the infection has caught so good and old a Democrat as the Knoxville Sentinel? Says our trans-mountain neighbor:

"Reading people out of the Democratic party is Henry Watterson's recognized specialty. When he says that no protectionist can be a Democrat, we assent while still hoping that the stray sheep will return to the fold. But when Mr. Watterson again puts on the pontifical robe to excommunicate the enemies of the saloon, we have to point out that he is giving an arbitrary definition to Democracy."

Observing as we pass, that being read out of the Democratic party, rather than reading others out of it, has constituted the familiar experience of the Courier-Journal, may we not earnestly, but without offense, point out that, when the Knoxville Sentinel describes the advocates of a wholesale and ruinous system of Prohibition as "the enemies of the saloon," it is begging the question and misleading its readers?

The "enemies of the saloon" have an easy and a ready way to make their will effective where they are strong enough. They can vote the saloon out of the vicinage. That is called Local Option. It is the Democratic way of removing a nuisance and moderating a distemper. It goes as far as the law can wisely go toward orderly government. It goes as far as the law can wisely go toward rational and efficient enforcement. In every instance where public sentiment stands united behind Local Option it has been successful in ridding the neighborhood of undesirable places.

The Prohibition which the Courier-Journal is contesting limits itself to no such purpose. It proposes a sweeping measure of abolition and extinguishment, taking no account of time and place, of private rights and public opinion. It proposes at once material and moral condemnation, taking no account of property claims and individual liberty. It proposes wholesale confiscation without compensation, or due process of law, the overthrow of an economic system and domestic occupation antedating the birth of the Commonwealth, and habits interlaced with the whole fabric of business and society, and the transfer of taxes from the liquor interests, which now pay them, to the backs of the poor, over-burdened farmer and working man, not expelling drink, but making the grafting official, instead of the State, the receiver general, and converting the open and licensed places, where those may get drink who want it, into secret and lawless places, where they have never failed to find it, no matter how efficacious the prohibition.

Those who deny such a purpose to Prohibition, and describe the Prohibitionists as simply "the enemies of the saloon" juggle with words, some meaning to evade the real issue, others to befog it, but all to deceive the people.

Call you this Democracy, dear old friend and fellow-Democrat of Knoxville? Why, what was the distinction between Jeffersonism and Hamiltonism, between Federalism and Republicanism, between Whigism and Democracy, if not laid in the proposition that the best government is that which governs least, which leaves each citizen a free agent as to his conscience and his conduct within the statutes made and provided to cover crime, which sets up home-rule and the rule of the home as the arks and covenants of human wisdom and liberty? The Courier-Journal is simply standing by these principles. It says that no man can violate them, or deny them, and remain a Democrat. He who does violate them, who does deny them, must be in favor of special privilege as an economic principle—i. e., a Protective Tariff—and Sumptuary Laws, which propose to make man good by statute—and therefore belongs to the School of Hamilton and Adams, not to the School of Jefferson and Jackson.

It seems that the Courier-Journal said something about a law, known as "the four-mile law" in Tennessee, mistaking it for a provisional limit, not a prohibitive edict, and the Sentinel comes up smiling and all unconscious with the following:

"The local option or four-mile law does not leave 'every individual free to develop upon his own lines of conscience and conduct.' It forbids the sale or purchase of intoxicating liquors except in four places in Tennessee. The bills passed by the last Legislature will forbid the manufacture, purchase or sale of such liquors anywhere in Tennessee. We would suggest respectfully that geography is not a sufficient foundation for political definitions."

Rot! Geography has sometimes made foundation for something even more tangible than political definitions; but, we won't dwell on that. If the "four-mile law" be what our Knoxville contemporary describes it to be, it can certainly not be called "a local option" law. To call it so is precisely of a piece with describing the Prohibitionists, who would confiscate property and invade the home, reducing every man to their own regimen and way of thinking, as "the enemies of the saloon." It is either a false issue, which our Knoxville contemporary makes, or else the Sentinel approves the Prohibition enactments of the last Tennessee Legislature, procured by a coalition of opportunist politicians and cranky bigots, taking advantage of a cruel tragedy, mongrel if not Republican in character. If it does that it is not a Democrat.

Take either horn of the dilemma, dear, whichever you please. "Yer pays your money and yer picks yer comp'ny," as the monkey said to the muley-cow, when he painted the cat's tail sky-blue!

Terrestrial Angels and the Children.

To-day the cornerstone of a new building for the Children's Free Hospital is to be laid with appropriate ceremony.

That seems a simple enough matter, but it is not so simple, for the cornerstone laying represents the culmination of one period of hard work and the beginning of another. We said hard work: heart work were probably more fitting, since from the start some twenty years ago the Children's Free Hospital has been an institution in which love has labored without reward except for the very pleasure of loving, and in which hearts have beaten soft symphonies of pity and mercy and brotherhood.

The Children's Free Hospital is largely the creature of women. Until it was brought into existence crippled children of the poor had scarcely a place to receive the treatment that might make them well or the tender ministrations that might ease their pain. There was the city hospital, but it had a different field; there were the orphanages, but they were for the fatherless and motherless; there were the infirmaries, but they were for special cases. It was for the sake of the little ones who were pining away in poverty-surrounded affliction that the benevolent souls of women united in the establishment of this hospital.

Through all the years it has been a struggle. It takes money to keep such an institution going, for there are heavy expenses of maintenance to be met; those actively engaged in the daily service must have their means to live. To meet these expenses money has been raised in various ways; at all times by earnest work. Sometimes entertainments have been given; sometimes special expedients have been employed; sometimes contributions have been sought and given; sometimes there have been voluntary gifts toward the support of the institution. Out of their bigness of heart there have been women, old and young, who have participated individually in the tasks of the hospital through sheer interest in doing good, and out of the fullness of their charity there have been physicians and surgeons to give their time and apply their science to the little cripples.

The hospital during this time has been more than local. Its beneficence has spread over the State like a blessed radiance. From mountain and valley have come tots with heart-melting sufferings to beg the relief which the hospital has within its power to give. To those of the founders who yet live a certain sense of reward has come in the pictures of happy spirits and smiling faces of the youngsters whose distress has been alleviated; those who have passed away linger in the memory of many beneficiaries as divinities who converted a mere, miserable world into a paradise; while both those who have died and those who live are glorified by young men and women who, once crippled children, are to-day making a way through life with the strength they gained at the Children's Free Hospital.

It is a fine thing that such an institution was started, and it is even a finer thing that it has been preserved for its good work during these passing years. But the finest thing is the fact that those who have toiled have prospered sufficiently to justify their erection of a new building—a larger one, with better equipment and ampler accommodations for the afflicted children; a place wherein more and more sad hearts may be made glad. It is the cornerstone of this new structure that is to be dedicated this afternoon. It is naturally a significant event to the women engaged and it ought to strike a responsive note in the sentiment of all Louisville people.

Moreover, it should be the ready impulse of humane folk to applaud the labors of the zealous forces back of the hospital and to lend a helping hand and willing purse. Those forces who do labor do so voluntarily. They behold a charitable task to do and they are simply doing it. They are ornaments to the race. To the feeble children they are angels, more beautiful and more wonderful than the angels of heaven. And to that Other who said: "Forasmuch as ye did it for the least of these little ones ye did it unto me," they must seem a faithful band of apostles and lieutenants.

The Same Old Plea.

At the recent annual meeting of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers its president, Mr. Simons, proclaimed that "the basis of our national prosperity is the high wages paid to American labor, and the only bulwark that can prevent that basis from being swept to destruction is a protective tariff." He sounded a warning that "unless the friends of protection rally to their standard and start a vigorous campaign of education to be carried out without intermission for the next three years defeat will await us in 1912." In which event, of course—or at least in case of "a reversion to a low tariff policy"—national prosperity would go to the bowwows.

The New York Journal of Commerce, a paper published in behalf of national trade, and whose interests consequently are intimately related to national prosperity, refuses to be alarmed by this gentleman's warning. It even goes so far as to argue that he does not know what he is talking about. It very aptly remarks:

"As Mr. Simons says, 'the tariff question is not so much a political question as it is an economic question,' though we do not see why it may not be both at the same time, and it is upon that fact that he rests his profound conviction that high wages is the basis of our national prosperity, and that the only bulwark that can prevent it from being swept to destruction is a protective tariff. It would be difficult to state the hallowed doctrine in a way to make its fallacy more open to attack. It assumes the wages paid to labor to be the cause instead of the result of its productiveness, for productiveness of the forces at work in the country must be the source of its prosperity. Prosperity consists of abundance of the things produced for the sustenance and comfort of the people and their equitable distribution among those entitled to share in them.

"If a country has such natural resources and advantages, such opportunities for productive labor, and such energetic and capable people that it can produce greater abundance in proportion to population than another country, why should it not be more prosperous, regardless of any question of legislation for the regulation of trade? Are not those the factors that make prosperity, and that make high wages and high rates of profit on capital? The man who supplies capital and ability gets a higher compensation and the man who supplies labor gets a better recompense because by their united efforts they create larger results per man than can be done in a country whose resources and advantages and whose opportunities and capacities are less. There is no more sense in saying that high wages are the basis of national prosperity than in saying that high profits on capital are the basis of prosperity. Both are results, effects, not causes, and the true measure of both wages and profits is the share in the fruits of their productive efforts that they will command."

Every word of that is true, and it is truth that has been accessible to every seeker of truth ever since there was any such thing as national prosperity in this country. Wages are high in the United States because labor is most productive in the United States. The workingman is well paid because he is worth it, because he earns the money. But it is useless to argue the question with men like Mr. Simons. They are in business for all they can get out of it. They can get more if the consumers are compelled, by means of high duties, to pay them more for their products than those products are worth, and invariably the way they attempt to justify the system which enables them to enjoy these subsidies is to insult the workingman by alleging that he is not worth what he is paid, that he is in effect a subject of charity and must be supported by the enforced largess of his fellow citizens.

Mr. Simons himself is engaged in a business protected by a high tariff and because there has been a strenuous protest against an attempt to raise that tariff still higher he is sounding the alarm against threatened national destruction. It is the same old greed, the same old trick, and the same Aldrich domination at Washington promises the same old result.

That artistic touch of fourteen paces is, as Ko Ko remarked on a historical occasion, "merely corroborative detail intended to give artistic versimilitude to a bald and uninteresting narrative."

The way the Chicago press is going after Senator Shelby Cullom, it must be quite consoling to Mr. Hopkins to reflect that the deadlock is to be continued indefinitely.

Wonder if the consumer remembers what he voted for?

THE REV. FRED HALE STILL BELIEVES IN JAMES PARRISH.

[To the Editor of the Courier-Journal.]

Will you kindly allow me to correct a wrong impression made by the Owensboro Messenger, in reporting my sermon at the Owensboro Third Baptist church on Wednesday night of this week, in which I used the James H. Parrish bank failure case as an illustration of Isaiah L, 10: "Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of his servant, that walketh in darkness, and hat no light? let him trust in the name of the Lord and stay upon his God."

Concerning the loss of the depositors and stockholders, and the wrecking of the bank, the Messenger quotes me as saying: "The Lord did it, and not Jim Parrish."

What I did say, in substance, was this: "The devil brought about the imprisonment of Joseph, as recorded in Genesis, chapter 39. God permitted it, though Joseph was innocent of criminal intent; and then God overruled the incident for the good of all concerned. This illustrates how, sometimes, an innocent man by force of circumstances, and the influence of his enemies, has to lie in jail; so it is in the case of Mr. Parrish."

"The devil brought about the suffering of Job and the terrible loss of life and destruction of the property of his family. God permitted it, though Job and his family were God-fearing people, and then God overruled the incident for Job's good, and the good of many thousands thereafter, who have learned lessons from God's providential dealing with His people who love and trust Him, when the light goes out, and the darkness of providence surrounds them. Thus it will be in the case of Mr. Parrish, and those of us who lost money by his bank failure. The devil brought it about, but God will counteract the work of the devil, and overrule this incident for good."

Concerning those who were used by the devil in bringing about the financial wreck of Mr. Parrish, and those associated with him as stockholders and depositors; and concerning those who, by writing or speaking, have done Mr. Parrish an injustice, I quoted God as saying: "Vengeance is mine; I will repay."

The occasion of the sermon was this: Since Mr. Parrish has received a five-year sentence for alleged receiving of deposits when he knew his bank was insolvent, many of his friends (for revenue only) have deserted him, and have gone with his enemies, taking the position that he is a hypocrite and thief, unworthy of confidence and sympathy of the people. As it was reported that I, his old-time friend, had also deserted him, having lost heavily by the bank failure; and as I was invited to preach in my old pulpit, on my visit to my "old Kentucky home," I slept with him behind the bars in the Hawesville jail, and went the next night into the pulpit with my testimony in reference to his character, as a Christian man, the victim of unpreventable circumstances which brought about his financial wreck, and the great loss of those who trusted their money to him for investment.

I gave a reason for the faith that is in me. If he had run off with, or appropriated to himself, his depositors' money, the proof of his criminality would have been clear; but, knowing the facts as I do, that he stood by the institution through the awful panic preceding its failure, and the combined forces of his enemies who were bent upon his ruin; and that not only he, but his brothers and sisters and mother and wife, and the dearest friends he had on earth, lost practically every cent they had, when the bank went into the hands of a receiver; and knowing the man as I do, and the awful struggle he had in trying to pull the bank through the crisis, day by day hoping against hope, I could not believe him to be a criminal at heart, nor that he had criminal intent in receiving deposits up to the time the bank was thrown into the hands of a receiver.

If the Court of Appeals confirms his sentence, and he has to serve a term in the State's prison, he will do it, in my opinion, conscious of no criminal intent in the bank's failure; and will glorify God in his prison life, as he has tried to glorify Him throughout his career as a business man.

Further, that we shall some day understand why God permitted this awful ruin to come to those who love, and are trying to obey Him. My message to those who are now in the darkness of this dispensation of His providence was to "trust in the name of the Lord, and stay upon his God." FRED D. HALE.

NOTED EDUCATOR IS SENTENCED TO EXILE.

Prof. Rochkoff, of University of Moscow, Convicted of Connection With Revolutionists.

Moscow, May 14.—The trial of the members of the local Social-Democratic organization came to an end here to-day. Eighteen of the prisoners were sentenced to perpetual exile in Siberia, and twenty others are to be imprisoned in a fortress for terms varying from one to three and a half years.

The exiles include Prof. Rochkoff, of the University of Moscow, whose connection with the party for a number of years has been a mystery to the police. The authorities were aware that one of the most competent members of the Central Committee resided permanently in Russia, but they never identified this man with the noted university authority on Russian history.

When Prof. Rochkoff was betrayed by his own carelessness, he went to St. Petersburg instead of fleeing abroad, and continued his activity under a false passport for four years before he was arrested in 1908. During the year preceding his imprisonment he produced a valuable work on the economic condition of Russia in the Sixteenth century.

The other men condemned include Police Judge Sparsky and Instructor Presin, of the University of Moscow, who will serve respectively terms of two years and eighteen months imprisonment.

Mr. Bryan On Brandenburg.

[Macon, Ga., News.]

The Republican politicians are not oppressed with a nice sense of honor and fair play in the opinion of William J. Bryan. They have never made any amends for trading on Broughton Brandenburg's Cleveland forgery at Bryan's expense, and the latter gently calls their attention to the fact in the following:

"Readers of the Commoner will remember that during the presidential campaign Republican newspapers made much of a letter said to have been written by the late Grover Cleveland. In this letter it was made to appear that Mr. Cleveland denounced Mr. Bryan and eulogized Mr. Taft. The Republican National Committee sent this letter broadcast and Republican newspapers printed profound editorials relating to it. Henry Watterson charged that the letter was bogus and he set on foot an investigation which resulted in showing the fact that the letter was a forgery. Brandenburg was indicted and released on $15,000 bail. He jumped his bond and for some time his whereabouts were unknown. Recently, however, he was arrested in San Francisco and it developed that on his way through St. Louis he kidnaped the little son of James Cabanne of St. Louis. The boy was returned to his father and Brandenburg is now fighting proceedings instituted for the purpose of returning him to New York for trial.

"It is worthy of note that, although the letter which was used by the Republican candidate to advantage prior to election day, was vouched for by a large number of Republicans and so-called independent newspapers, not one of these papers has apologized to its readers for its part in this disgraceful affair."

Mr. Bryan is barking up the wrong tree in trying to reach the consciences of Republican politicians and newspapers. They are probably congratulating themselves that they were able to utilize the forgery to great advantage before it was completely exposed.

NEGRO PROBLEM SOLVED, SAYS HILARY HERBERT.

Former Secretary of the Navy Makes Address At Confederate Memorial Exercises.

Norfolk, Va., May 14.—To-day's Confederate Memorial day observance in Norfolk was made notable by an address by former Secretary of the Navy Hilary Herbert and a military and civic parade of proportions surpassing any like event here.

Beneath the American and Confederate and the Virginia State flags, Mr. Herbert addressed a large indoor audience. He said in part:

"We lost our battle for the independence of the Confederacy. To that we are reconciled. We all agree it is best that there is but one flag. What we have to be proud and grateful for is that at last in the Union, with the idea of disunion forever buried, and under the flag that is powerful enough to protect us and our descendants against all the nations of the earth, we finally triumphed in all our States over carpet-bag and negro rule, the creature of radicalism.

"Office did not benefit, money could not buy, the power of government did not awe us, and we won. I am glad to say that we are making it all our State Legislatures a noble use of our victory.

"There is no law among our statutes that does the negro injustice. New Constitutions have been devised for the benefit of both races, and I honestly believe that, now we have reached the solution, in its main outlines, of the negro problem, which has been the curse of America."

CHARLES CHURCHILL DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Supervisor Under Board of Public Works Succumbs At Home of His Brother.

Charles T. Churchill, 43 years of age, a supervisor under the Board of Public Works, died at 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning at his home, 1151 Underhill street, after an illness of more than a month. His death had been expected for the last two weeks and members of the family were at the bedside when the end came.

Mr. Churchill was foreman at the Ballard mills before receiving the appointment of supervisor. He was not married and lived with his brother, Samuel T. Churchill. He also leaves another brother, H. T. Churchill, of Frankfort. He was a nephew of Mrs. Luke Blackburn and Mrs. Hampden Zane, and was affiliated with the Masonic order and the Junior Order of American Mechanics.

The body was taken to Elizabethtown yesterday afternoon where the burial will take place this morning in the old family cemetery.

Kurtzmann Pianos

Have for sixty years set the standard for lasting quality at a moderate cost.

By a careful consideration of operating expenses, the makers of the Kurtzmann Piano have been able to make every dollar spent go into the construction of the instrument itself.

That their efforts in this line have been successful is best proven by the fact that, in Kentucky alone, thousands of satisfied purchasers stand ready to recommend them, and over six hundred Kurtzmanns are in use in teachers' studios, academies, schools, etc. There is not a residence section of Louisville without at least from one to ten of these beautiful instruments.

"KURTZMANN" has become a household word, and the increasing demand for the Kurtzmann Piano proves beyond a doubt that the discriminating public is always quick to give its hearty approval to the highest merit.

We have just received a choice selection of these pianos for our spring business, and we offer the intending purchaser the opportunity for a wide variety of choice.

PREPARATIONS

For Local Option Election, May 27, Being Made.

FORMER NEW ALBANY WOMAN DIES IN PENNSYLVANIA.

KINMAN BRINGS SUIT FOR $5,000 AS DAMAGES.

TO GUARD AGAINST GERMS.

Active preparations are being made for the local option election to be held in Floyd county May 27 and petitions have been presented in regard to the matter. One to the board of election commissioners, presented yesterday, follows:

"To the Honorable Board of Election Commissioners—Gentlemen: We, the undersigned committee, representing all the liquor interests in the county of Floyd, do hereby respectfully request your honorable board to appoint on each of the forty-one election boards at the local option election to be held May 27, 1909, one judge and one clerk recommended and selected by the "wet" committee and one judge and one clerk recommended and selected by the "dry" committee to serve as such at said election. We do this in the interest of fairness, with the assurance that this committee does not want a single vote counted for the "wets" that they are not honestly and justly entitled to. Respectfully submitted. George Strack, James McManus, James Corbett, John J. Lyons, Henry L. Meinhardt, Charles Kochenrath, Edward Jackson, Frank Bocard and Thomas Eurton, committee."

The following petition also will be presented to the Board of County Commissioners at the meeting this morning:

"May 15, 1909—To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners of Floyd County—Gentlemen: We, the undersigned committee, representing all the liquor interests in Floyd county, do hereby respectfully request that the election inspectors at the local option election to be held on May 27, 1909, be equally divided between the "wets" and "drys," that is, that your honorable board permit the "wet" committee to select one-half the inspectors and that you permit the "dry" committee to select one-half of said inspectors. We do this in the interest of fairness and with the assurance that we want fair play, nothing more, nothing less. Respectfully submitted. George Strack, James McManus, James Corbett, John J. Lyons, Henry L. Meinhardt, Charles Kochenrath, Edward Jackson, Frank Bocard and Thomas Eurton, committee."

Must Limit the Speed.

The Board of Police Commissioners of New Albany has entered an order directing the police department to enforce the ordinance providing that automobiles shall not be operated at a higher rate of speed than ten miles an hour. Complaint has been made that the speed limit was being exceeded by the chauffeurs of the city and the patrolmen have been ordered to enforce the law and file complaints against those who violate it. Hereafter drivers of machines must confine themselves to the rate of ten miles an hour, and as they approach street intersections must slow up.

Instructions were also issued by the board that members of the police department must take no active part in the wet and dry election to be held in New Albany Thursday, May 27, and the commissioners have decided to allow each of the officers and patrolmen a vacation of ten days during the summer.

Must Use Covered Wagons.

The County Board of Health of Floyd county has taken steps to stop the practice of gatherers of slops and offals from carrying it through the streets and alleys of the city in open wagons, in violation of the State laws prohibiting the practice, which is calculated to spread disease. It was said by Dr. C. W. McIntyre, secretary of the County Board of Health, that complaints would be filed unless parties gathering the refuse cover the wagons. He said that in many cases the wagons gather material from houses where diphtheria, consumption and other contagious diseases exist and it is then peddled from one locality to another.

The Board of Health is also paying attention to the scattering of tuberculosis bacilli by the carelessness and thoughtlessness of persons going into the alleys which are used by those afflicted, and the sputum drying and the bacilli being scattered by the wind.

Dies In Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Bridget Byrne, widow of Joseph Byrne, a former resident of New Albany, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. Boland, Port Allegheny, Pa. She was 70 years old and is survived by three daughters and a son—Mrs. J. A. Boland and Miss Nona Boland, Port Allegheny; Mrs. Frank Broeker, New Albany, and the Rev. Joseph F. Byrne, Indianapolis.

Her body will reach New Albany tomorrow at noon and will be taken to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Broeker. The funeral will take place Monday morning from Holy Trinity parochial church. Services will be conducted by the Rev. Charles Curran, the rector, and the burial will be in the cemetery on the Green Valley road.

Choir Elects Officers.

The Mendelssohn Choir, of New Albany, a leading musical organization of that city, has elected officers as follows: Frank J. Poutch, president; G. W. Schneider, vice president; J. J. Helck, secretary; E. J. Walker, treasurer; John L. Scott, librarian; Earl G. Hedden, director; Robert Conner, accompanist; H. W. Heaslett, Earl G. Hedden, J. J. Helck, John Peterson, Frank G. Poutch, G. W. Schneider, John L. Scott, Walter G. Terstegge and Eugene W. Walker, directors.

After the usual summer vacation the choir will begin the active work the first Thursday evening in September.

Sues Electric Company.

John W. Kinman, by his next friend, John T. Kinman, filed suit in the Floyd Circuit Court at New Albany yesterday against the United Gas and Electric Company of that city to recover $5,000 as damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained May 15, 1907, by grasping a live guy wire near Main and Galt streets. The suit was brought on the part of Kinman by Paris & Trusty as attorneys, and it is alleged that he was burned, the nerve tissues destroyed and he was permanently injured. Negligence on the part of the company is alleged.

Knoefel returned yesterday from Indianapolis, where he had been attending the annual conclave of the Indiana Commandery Knights Templar and the annual meeting of the Independent Telephone Association. Mr. Knoefel was re-elected a member of the executive committee of the Independent Telephone Association.

—The southbound passenger train on the Monon collided early yesterday morning with a freight train seven miles south of Bloomington. No passengers were injured. Conductor M. C. Hackett was cut about the face and hands and Engineer Charles Gore and Fireman M. L. Gore, of the passenger train, jumped and escaped with slight bruises.

—Sir Knight Charles Day, of New Albany Commandery, No. 5, Knights Templar, who has been grand commander of Indiana during the last year, was presented with a jewel at the closing session of the annual conclave at Indianapolis, when he retired from office. The presentation was made by Alfred C. Ormond, of Mishawaka, for the grand commandery.

—W. O. Sweeney, contractor for the West Main street improvement, has filed a suit in the Circuit Court against Lorenzo Payne, to foreclose a street improvement lien against 160 feet of ground on West Main street, amounting to $970. The Illinois Life Insurance Company and the Marion County Construction Company, both holding liens against the property, were made defendants in the action.

—The Afternoon Club was entertained by Miss Bertha Meinhardt on the Silver Hills, west of the city. Those present were Misses May and Blanche Zimmerman, Anna Moser, Etta Kiesse, Florence Schefold and Amelia Meinhardt, of this city; Misses Isabelle Lutz, Irene Weller, Ethel and Olive Hopkins, and May Specht, Louisville; Katherine and May Clarke, Memphis, and Miss Tommy Dather, Chicago.

—The funeral of Peter Clemenson took place yesterday afternoon from the family home, 1109 Constitution street, under the direction of Hope Lodge of Odd Fellows, of which he was the oldest member; Friendship Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and the New Albany Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association. Services were conducted by the Rev. Frank T. Porter, pastor of the Park Christian Church, and the burial was in Fairview cemetery.

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN BRINGS GOOD RESULTS.

The campaign recently started by Chairman George T. Cross of the membership committee of the Builders' Exchange, has borne good fruit already. This was evidenced yesterday at the May meeting of the board of directors when the following nine applications were passed on favorably:

Sidney Iring, Kosmos Portland Cement Co.; Stratton & Terstegge Co., Davis Urwick Co., Fred Kigus, W. S. Genoveley, H. W. Newman, Dodgen & Barret, Fred G. Jones & Co.

At an enthusiastic meeting of the membership committee held yesterday it was reported that nearly ten other reputable contractors had promised to sign application blanks and the committee resolved to double that number within thirty days.

Owing to the fact that no builder is solicited for membership in the exchange until his financial responsibility and his reputation for fair dealing are thoroughly investigated the work of the membership committee appears al; the more commendable.

Marriage Licenses.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday as follows:

Oliver F. Richards and Annie Evelyn Whitney, James L. Scott and Bertha Miller.

CONVICT

Who Escaped From Reformatory Recaptured.

SALOON LICENSE APPLICATION DEVELOPS KNOTTY QUESTION.

HEARING IN COMPLICATED SUIT BEGINS ACROSS RIVER.

CITY GAINS A GOOD POINT.

Perry Tyler, who bolted out of the Indiana Reformatory in Jeffersonville on the evening of December 28, 1908, is under arrest at Fort Wayne, Ind., after being chased from Jeffersonville over several counties in Indiana and through a part of Ohio. Whether he will be brought back to the institution or tried as a horse-thief is yet undecided. Should he be returned he has nearly nine years ahead of him on his original sentence. Tyler came to the reformatory from Kokomo in 1902 to serve from one to fourteen years on the charge of grand larceny in stealing a horse and buggy. He made a model prisoner and he was paroled early in 1904. It was only a short time until he disappeared and was next found in the Ohio Reformatory at Mansfield, he having been sent there on the charge of horsestealing. He was returned to Jeffersonville and again became a model inmate. Last December he was taken out of a shop and placed in the guards' quarters after being informed he would be paroled at the January meeting of the board of trustees. Without any provocation that is known he was dissatisfied he suddenly ran out of the building and escaped, taking the hat of an officer with him. He was lost track of until recently.

Brings Up Knotty Question.

Notice has been given by James B. Staton, of Henryville, Ind., that at the next meeting of the Board of County Commissioners, which will be held in Jeffersonville on June 7, he will apply for license to retail intoxicating liquors in less quantities than one quart at a time, with the privilege of allowing the same to be drunk on the premises where sold. The place is described as being the northwest room fronting on Railroad street, which room is fifteen feet long by fourteen and eight-tenths feet wide, and is on the ground floor of the concrete cottage on lot 33, in the town of Henryville.

Monroe township, in which Henryville is located, has been dry through a remonstance for four years, which covers two different periods of two years each. The last remonstrance was granted in June, 1907, and the question is to be raised whether it is in effect at the coming meeting of the board. The records show that the order was made on June 3, 1907, and it is claimed by the friends of Staton that it is not in force after the same day this year, which is four days prior to the time the application will be acted upon and six days before the local county option election will be held.

Suit To Quiet Title.

The suit of Arthur M. Hart, Rufus Hart, Mary A. Williams and Sarah Knox against Sarah A. Matzener, Katie Matzener, Catherine Matzener and Sanford Mussetter, to quiet the title to a farm of ninety acres in Washington township, Clark county, Ind., that was formerly owned by George Mussetter, went on trial in the Clark Circuit Court in Jeffersonville yesterday before a jury, and is a complicated litigation. The only real defendant cated litigation. The only real defendant is Sarah C. Matzener, who lives in Kansas City, Mo., and was known by the other two names. The last named defendant, if living, is her son, but the belief is that he is dead. This is one of the contentions. Mrs. Matzener was in court and brought with her from Kansas City her attorney, W. R. Clark, who was admitted to practice in the Clark Circuit Court on motion of James E. Taggart.

Victory For City.

Through Judge Harry C. Montgomery, of the Clark Circuit Court, overruling a motion of the defendant to require the relator to make its complaint more specific in the suit of the State of Indiana ex rel. the City of Jeffersonville against the Jeffersonville Water Supply Company, the city of Jeffersonville scored a victory yesterday in the fight for pure water. Suit was filed some time ago by the city to compel the water company by an alternative writ of mandate to live up to the terms of its franchise, which in part was that wholesome water for drinking purposes would be supplied for private consumers, and the city would be given a service for fire use of sufficient pressure from plugs not to require the maintaining of a fire engine.

NOTES OF THE NEWS FROM JEFFERSONVILLE.

—The Jeffersonville Commercial Club has selected June 15 as a date for a trip to Indianapolis by those who desire to make it for the purpose of advertising the city. A price of $5 has been named, which will include all of the expenses.

—While doing some work on a stepladder, Charles Dinsmore, who is an employe of the Government Depot and lives at 914 Meigs avenue, accidentally fell, sustaining serious injuries. He is being attended by Dr. O. P. Graham.

—The following claims were allowed yesterday against the estate of Martha J. Miller: Emery Inzer, $36.25; Martin A. Conroy, $37.74; Fred Mayo, $3.50; Ell M. Lindley, $29.35, all of the amounts being on accounts.

—The regular meeting of the Gentlemen's Literary Club was held with Prof. C. M. Marble at the High School building last night, and a paper on "Alexander Hamilton" was read by George H. Coleman.

—Irvin Schiller, the 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schiller, of Port Fulton, died yesterday morning from an attack of scarlet fever, and the burial will take place to-morrow afternoon. Two more children in the family are in a critical condition from the same disease.

—Suffering from injuries sustained in this city while attempting to board an interurban car, Frank Kaelin is in a serious condition at his home near Charlestown. He was able to go home unassisted, but since that time has not been in a condition to leave his bed.

—At a party given by Mr. and Mrs. William Masmer, at their home in Charlestown, to the T. N. C. Club, cards in the shape of bells were distributed announcing the engagement of Miss Della Masmer and John E. Peyton, but no date for the marriage was given.

—Sheriff Johnson will leave for Michigan City this morning with George Wilson, a tramp, who was recently sentenced to the State prison on a plea of guilty to the charge of obtaining money by false pretenses in passing a worthless check on N. Solinger.

—Since the police began war on the owners of unlicensed dogs there is a large increase in the number of applicants for tags. Up to last night Charles A. Schimpff, City Controller, had issued 240 licenses, which is within forty-three of last year.

—In the foreclosure proceeding of William F. Work, administrator of the estate of Mary J. Nickles, against Lucinda Nickles, an order was made in the Circuit Court yesterday for an entry to be filed showing the mortgage had been satisfied.

—A formal motion for a new trial was filed yesterday by George L. McCutcheon and Harry W. Martin, who were found guilty by a jury on the charge of selling a diseased horse to Charles Marshall. McCutcheon was fined $165.90 and Martin $50.

—A petition was filed in the Circuit Court yesterday by the plaintiff, asking further time to file a bill of exceptions in the divorce proceeding of Mrs. Sallie Cortner against William P. Cortner, the decree having been granted the defendant.

—A general mass meeting of all the junior societies of the various churches in the city will be held at the First Baptist church on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and notices have been sent out urging all the members to be present and especially asking those not connected with any of the organizations to attend.

—The condition of Miss Mabel Hay, who is suffering from an attack of pneumonia at a Louisville infirmary, following an operation two weeks ago to-day for appendicitis, is slightly improved, and hope for her recovery is now entertained. Dr. D. C. Peyton, her uncle, was summoned home from Fort Smith, Ark.

—Carl Wenton, of Indianapolis, attorney for the State Anti-Saloon League, arrived in the city yesterday to remain several days to assist in organizing the local option adherents. Yesterday afternoon he delivered a talk to the Civic League at Wall-street Methodist Episcopal church.

—An invitation has been accepted by Prof. Frank E. Andrews, of this city, to deliver the address at the memorial services to be held by the Knights of Pythias of Sellersburg on Sunday, June 6. He will also go to Fredericksburg, Ind., on May 30, to deliver an address for the Odd Fellows.

—The appealed action of the city of Jeffersonville against James Herman was put at issue in the Circuit Court yesterday, but was not set down for trial. Herman was fined in the City Court some time ago on the charge of permitting a horse to run at large and took an appeal.

—James L. Miller, the veteran mail-carrier of this city, began his annual vacation yesterday, and will spend it as he usually does, in attending the State encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which will be held this year at Crawfordsville. He left last night as a delegate from Post 88 of this city, and will remain at Indianapolis until Monday.

—A final report was filed yesterday by Amos B. Stacey, Jr., who was appointed administrator of the estate of Amos B. Stacey, Sr., on November 30, 1871. He reported that during the long period he collected $7,153.87 and paid out $7,415.48, an excess of $261.62. The real estate under his charge will have to be sold to satisfy a school fund mortgage.

—John Schwaller, formerly the owner of a popular restaurant in this city, celebrated the 78th anniversary of his birth a few days ago at his present home in Charlestown and received many presents, one of which was a mammoth cake from his nephews in Louisville, a similar gift having been bestowed on every birthday for several years.

—The annual meeting of Mountain Grove Cemetorial Association, of Monroe township, will be held May 20, and the Rev. T. M. Hawes, of Louisville, will deliver the address at the services in the afternoon. During the morning the graves will be decorated and there will be a business meeting of the association.

—Judge Joseph H. Shea, of Seymour, was on the bench of the Circuit Court for a time yesterday and overruled the demurrer to the complaint in the suit instituted some time ago to prevent the issuing of bonds on which to secure funds to build about fifty miles of free gravel roads in Charlestown township. After the case is put at issue it will be set down for trial.

NIGHT RIDER JUROR TAKES HIS OWN LIFE.

Mansfield Haroldson Worried Over Part In Trial of Six Men Condemned To Death.

Nashville, Tenn., May 14.—A Union City, Tenn., dispatch says:

Mansfield Haroldson, a prominent farmer living north of this place, committed suicide last night. His body was discovered early to-day suspended by a rope in his buggy house.

Haroldson was one of the jurors who tried the eight night riders at this place last January, six of whom were sentenced to be hanged, and it is said the worry over that trial so weighed on his mind as to unbalance it. Once before he had secured a rope and would have taken his life had it not been prevented.

BIG CIRCUS

Gives Two Performances In Louisville To-day.

PRECEDED BY PARADE OVER PRINCIPAL STREETS.

SHOW GROUNDS AT TWENTY-EIGHTH AND BROADWAY.

SMALL BOY IS DELIGHTED.

Fond and doting parents should not worry if the pride and joy of their hearts does not put in an appearance at the morning meal to-day. It isn't a rash guess at all to surmise that he might be found, along with innumerable "Tom Sawyers," at the railroad yards or the circus grounds. For the circus has come to town—Barnum & Bailey's—and thousands will travel back over the road to yesterday when the ringmaster's whip cracks at 2 of the clock this afternoon. It's a day to revive childish recollections and gives the older people a fine chance to ransack the cedar chest and dig up one or more of the motheaten excuses which do duty each recurring circus day as an apology for visiting the tented city.

Yesterday the circus exhibited in Owensboro and left there last night upon its own four special trains, comprising eighty-five cars. With the first peep of sunlight this morning hundreds took their way to the railroad yards to catch a glimpse of the elephant, kangaroo, the lion and the tiger. While the small people are always overjoyed at the sight as a glittering generality, the adults marvel at the perfect system that prevails in handling the impedimenta that goes to make up the circus. It fairly makes the housewife who has had experience in May-day moving green with envy. Without a hitch and the minimum of confusion the circus will be detrained and start in orderly fashion for the grounds which are to be transformed as if by magic into a city of canvas, the habitat for a day of the 1,200 odd people who go to make up the circus community.

Parade Starts At 10 O'Clock.

Much of the work of the day will be negotiated before the average man picks up his favorite morning paper. With breakfast over, the work of getting the parade out will claim attention. The last visit here the Barnum show gave no parade, but it has been restored as a factor of circus day, and a display is promised which will more than atone for its temporary elimination. It will leave the grounds at 10 o'clock and will be a "hummer," exhibiting the resources of the circus in certain fashion.

Over 500 horses will be seen in line and the animal display will be a notable one. The performances will be given at 2 and 8 o'clock, doors being opened at 1 and 7 o'clock.

The menagerie is larger than ever before and includes a fine showing of the animals whose cousins and aunts are just now being much harassed by a well-known American Nimrod. The show starts off in the good old-fashioned way, with a "grand processional prelude," enlisting the services of most of the company, all resplendent in gorgeous wardrobe and medals enough to satisfy an amateur lifesaver.

Many Thrills Promised.

Then comes the real fun, and for a matter of two hours three rings, two stages and the track are in constant requisition. Most of the acts are new to this country and include names which read like an account of a Russian and Japanese battle. Jupiter, the balloon horse, will be one of the first numbers on the long bill, and to top everything off will come the latest and greatest of "thrillers." Desperado, the Frenchman, who makes a headlong dive from the top of the tent and alights upon his chest. It is a rare instance of personal skill and calculation, and no insurance actuary has been found who will figure upon the risk taken. All in all, it is promised to be a circus such as our daddies never saw, and which will make small boydom fall upon its neck with the customary clash of delight. The circus grounds are at Twenty-eighth street and Broadway. Following is the route of the parade:

Leaving the showgrounds at about 10 o'clock—North on Twenty-eighth street to Chestnut street, to Fourth avenue, to Jefferson street, to First street, to Market street, to Twenty-sixth street, to Broadway, to grounds.

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD BOY DROWNS IN GRAVEL PIT.

Vincennes, Ind., May 14.—[Special.]—Calling frantically to his companions to help him out, Emmet Combs, aged 8 years, son of Earl Combs, a teamster, drowned in twenty feet of water late this afternoon at the James O'Donell gravel pit, one mile south of the city. Divers recovered the body two hours later. The mother was informed while on the street of the drowning and rushed home, screaming at the top of her voice, where she now lies prostrated.

Some philosophers are of the opinion that prohibition must necessarily be good because it is so painful.—[Chicago Record-Herald.

WANDERS ALL NIGHT.

KERMIT ROOSEVELT LOST IN WILDS OF AFRICA.

Party Break Camp, and Are Now Guests At McMillan's Ju Ja Ranch.

Nairobi, British East Africa, May 14.—It was learned here early to-day that Kermit Roosevelt lost his way from his father's camp, near Machakos, last Friday, and spent an entire night alone on horseback riding through a region unknown to him. On Saturday morning, he turned up at Kiu, a station on the railway, inquiring there the way to camp. He was given the desired information.

Theodore Roosevelt, accompanied by his son Kermit, arrived at the Ju Ja ranch of George McMillan to-day. They came from their camp at Machakos. They will remain at Ju Ja from four to ten days, according to the luck they have in hunting impalla, buffalo, warthog and waterbuck. At the conclusion of their visit with Mr. McMillan, Mr. Roosevelt and his son will come to Nairobi.

The porters of the expedition will go straight south from the Ju Ja ranch to avoid the smallpox here. Mr. Roosevelt and Kermit will spend a few days in Nairobi and then leave to rejoin the expedition.

The region in which Kermit Roosevelt is reported to have been lost lies between the Athi River and the Uganda railway, Kiu, where he finally found himself, is about fifty miles below Nairobi and thirty or forty miles southeast of Machakos. There is an old cart road from Machakos to Kiu, but otherwise the country and the region thereabouts are very sparsely inhabited by natives of the Wakamba tribe, a peaceful people, engaged chiefly in agriculture.

Despondent Girl Kills Herself.

Vincennes, Ind., May 14.—[Special.]—Despondent and tired of living, Miss Mabel Hicks, aged 23 years, committed suicide early to-night at her home at 17 South First street, by taking two ounces of carbolic acid. The poison was taken in the presence of several friends who attempted to dash the bottle from her lips. She is an orphan.

CORNERSTONE

For Children's Free Hospital This Afternoon

WILL BE LAID BY MISS MARY LAFON.

GOV. WILLSON TO DELIVER THE CHIEF ADDRESS.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO SING.

The cornerstone of the new building for the Children's Free Hospital will be laid at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon with appropriate ceremonies. The devotional part of the exercises will be led by representative ministers of the city, and the address of the day will be made by Gov. Augustus E. Willson, and the honor of laying the cornerstone will rest on Miss Mary Lafon, the woman who, by her untiring labor and generous spirit, made the free hospital the success that it is today.

In accordance with the latest requirements of medical and surgical science, the new structure is being built from plans which embody every convenience and improvement.

At the Children's Free Hospital there are twenty-four beds at the present time. All of these beds are filled. Taking a look through the wards and dressing rooms one sees in the cots pathetic little forms, whose crooked backs or diseased joints and ears and eyes arouse pity instantly. As the visitor goes from room to room he feels rather than sees the wistful expressions as big brown or blue or gray eyes follow his movements.

A friend of the hospital, in speaking of it yesterday, said:

"This is the time most appropriate to recall and to make known the fact that the Children's Free Hospital of Louisville originated with Miss Mary Lafon, and that the erection of this new hospital is due to her untiring efforts. In her charitable work she found how great the need was for a proper place to care for sick and crippled children.

"When the cyclone of 1890 swept over our city this need was further emphasized, and the thought was crystallized into action. So great was the interest aroused that a mass meeting was called in 1891 and sufficient money subscribed to purchase the building which has served this cause so well, in spite of its great limitations.

"While the house was being prepared for occupancy, a little boy arrived unexpectedly. A bed was quickly prepared, a nurse procured and from that day, in January, 1892, until to-day, the hospital has never for one moment ceased its ministrations.

"It is truly a day of rejoicing for those who have worked together for seventeen years, to see their hopes and aspirations realized at last by laying the cornerstone of this building which will be dedicated to the relief of the little ones of earth, whose suffering appeals most to the human heart.

"The physicians of the city who have so nobly and generously given of their time and skill, take pride and interest in this occasion.

The clergy likewise, fully realizing the ethical side of this work, have given it their cordial support and sympathy."

More Than the Accommodations.

Even at the start there were many more applicants for treatment than there were facilities for treating. From time to time beds were added until at the present twenty-four patients can be accommodated. Many of the beds are endowed. During the past twenty years more than 2,000 children have been inmates of the Children's Hospital and while there have had the careful attention of physicians, surgeons and trained nurses. The children are kept at the institution until they are entirely restored to physical strength. The source of their disease is studied, removed, and then they are put under physical training to give them health before they are returned to their homes.

The institution is located on Chestnut street, almost opposite the City Hospital. Col. R. T. Durrett has been president since it was established, as has Miss Mary Lafon, who is vice president. A. G. Barrett is secretary, Louis Barkhouse is treasurer, and Miss Laura Wilson, a graduate of the Massachusetts General Hospital of Boston, is superintendent.

The programme for the ceremonies of the cornerstone laying follow. The exercises begin promptly at 3:30 o'clock:

NO LONGER PROBLEM FOR MEN OF SCIENCE

DR. OSLER SAYS CONSUMPTION IS CASE FOR PUBLIC.

PEOPLE MUST BE TAUGHT TO FIGHT WHITE PLAGUE.

CANNON AND BRYCE SPEAK.

Washington, May 14.—That tuberculosis is no longer a problem of the doctors, that it probably will take two or three generations to reduce its ravages to the rate at which typhoid fever has been eliminated, and that the public must be awakened to a greater sense of its responsibility in combating the disease, was the substance of an address by Dr. William Osler, the noted physician of Baltimore and Oxford, England, before a public meeting to-day of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Other distinguished men who spoke were Ambassador James Bryce and Speaker Cannon, of the House of Representatives, both of whom urged the fostering of the idea of children's playgrounds as a means of keeping them in the open air as much as possible.

Dr. Osler congratulated the association on work it had done, the three principal things accomplished having been, he said, the awakening of the public, the loosening up of the money bags of the Legislatures and of philanthropic persons and the enlistment of men and women who are thoroughly in earnest in the movement. He dwelt at length upon the need of money to carry on the work, and favored small subscriptions, ranging from $1 to 10 cents. It was essential, he declared, that the citizens should get in the habit of contributing for a cause so great. One of the most important problems in dealing with the disease, he said, was in improving the social condition of the poor.

Three things remained to be done, said Dr. Osler. The first was to keep the public awake, the second to obtain more money and the third to arouse the interest of more men and women, because the campaign was no longer one entirely for the doctors.

"Whether tuberculosis will be finally eradicated," he said, "is even an open question. It is a foe that is very deeply intrenched in the human race. Very hard it will be to eradicate completely, but when we think of what has been done in one generation, how the mortality in many places has been reduced more than 50 per cent., indeed, in some places 100 per cent., it is a battle of hope, and so long as we are fighting with hope the victory is in sight."

Ambassador Bryce praised the men of science because, he said, they belonged to all the people. They were more of a link and bond of union between peoples than even men of letters, because, he said, "there are some men of letters who use their pen, not for the purpose of promoting friendship, but rather of promoting suspicion and distrust between different nations."

He gave numerous statistics regarding the campaign in Scotland and Ireland against the white plague, showing that the death rate had been enormously reduced. He paid a high tribute to the medical officers of the United States in stamping out yellow fever in Cuba, and characterized it as one of the greatest of scientific achievements.

Speaker Cannon made a characteristic talk and aroused the audience to laughter when, turning to Dr. Osler, he said:

"Dr. Osler, I have reached the age of 61 and I shake my fist in your face."

Dr. Osler laughed heartily at this defiance of his old-age theory.

PROMISED SUPPORT OF WORKMEN'S UNIONS

A GENERAL REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT THREATENED.

FRENCH POSTAL STRIKERS MEANWHILE LOSE GROUND.

MANY RETURN TO THEIR JOBS.

Paris, May 14.—The striking postal employes at a meeting this afternoon adopted resolutions appealing to the workmen's organizations to make common cause with them. The meeting was attended by M. Pataud, secretary of the Electricians' Union; M. Guerard, of the railroad men's organization, and other representatives of the workmen, who delivered inflammatory speeches, promised the postal employes immediate support, and threatened, if necessary, to place themselves under the direction of the revolutionary General Federation of Labor. These threats produced no big scare, but there is a strong suspicion here that the leaders in the movement are bluffing.

The strike of the postmen itself apparently has lost ground. The men seemingly are convinced that the agitators are acting for their personal ends, and as the tools of the revolutionary Socialist organizations, and they hesitate to risk losing their permanent situations and pensions.

At Chartiers and Dijon to-day the strikers, in view of the attitude taken by Parliament in connection with the strike, voted to return to work. The Government officials here continue to express confidence that the entire movement is collapsing. It is pointed out by them that only 48,000 out of the 300,000 railroad men whose support was pledged the strikers to-day by M. Guerard, belong to the union, and that these members are mostly trackmen and artisans employed in the shops.

It is reported to-night that the strikers in their desperation again are cutting the telegraph wires in Paris and the provinces.

The meeting held here this afternoon was attended by 3,000 strikers and delegates from various workmen's unions. The strike leaders delivered highly-inflammatory speeches, in which they charged that the police and military precautions taken by the Government showed that it was intended "to drown the strike movement in blood." They favored a direct appeal to the workmen's unions for cooperation with them in their fight, and said great enthusiasm the strikers voted unanimously for such alliance with the workmen, "with all its consequences."

Immediately after the vote was taken M. Guerard, the delegate of the railroad men, pledged to the postal employes the immediate support of his union. He was followed by M. Passenaud, the secretary of the gasworkers' organization, who announced that his union would promptly take action on the vote. M. Pataud, of the Electricians' Union, also promised for the part twelve or fifteen days. Dr. Linn had probably half a dozen pimples on the face, and Dr. Travis said he did not believe Dr. Linn had smallpox.

ANNOUNCED CANDIDATES TO HOLD CONFERENCE.

Matter Determined Upon Yesterday At Meeting of Democratic Central Committee.

At a meeting of the Democratic city and county committee, held at headquarters, 224 Fourth avenue, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, it was decided to hear all the Democratic candidates who have announced to date regarding further organization for the coming campaign. For that purpose it was decided to call a general meeting of candidates for consultation with the committee. The date fixed for conference is May 24. The place of meeting has not yet been decided upon.

Dr. J. R. Collier, chairman, was authorized to select a suitable place to be announced later.

While other minor details were discussed, no definite action was taken further than to arrange for the conference. A full committee was present at yesterday's meeting

SMALLPOX EPIDEMIC NEARING ITS END

BOARD OF HEALTH TO RAISE THE QUARANTINE.

AFFECTED BUSINESS SHARPLY

Kuttawa, Ky., May 14.—[Special.]—The smallpox epidemic in this city appears to be almost at an end and there has been no new cases developed within the past ten days. A member of the board of health said to-day that he thought all imminent danger was over, and the quarantine would be lifted some time next week.

A total of the cases reaches about seventy in number, since it began to break out during the month of March, this year. To-day there is about twelve cases remaining, but it is probable these victims will be able to rid themselves in a few days. Normal conditions in health are making war on the infection and many of the citizens feel highly elated over the future prospects of having it stamped out.

The epidemic has been a great detriment to industry in all parts of the county, as well as nearby towns and cities, which quarantined against anyone hailing from this city. Business interests have fallen off fully 50 per cent. Farmers from all the towns who usually frequent the city have driven far to other places to make purchases.

Despite the number of cases in the vicinity of Kuttawa, it has been the lightest form of the contagion experienced in this part of the State, according to medical authorities. This is credited to a large number of vaccinations, which materially aided in stamping out the contraction of the disease and immediate effect of its severity.

It is reported there will be another meeting of the board of health at an early date, relative to the quarantine regulations, so that it may be lifted, and quite a number of the patients released who are at present confined to their homes awaiting developments in new cases. Dr. Cyrus H. Linn, a member of the board of health, has been among those confined for the past twelve or fifteen days. Dr. Linn had probably half a dozen pimples on the face, and Dr. Travis said he did not believe Dr. Linn had smallpox.

RIVER TELEGRAMS.

Pittsburg, May 14.—[Special.]—Horrified at the terrible disaster of Tuesday night, when more than a score of workmen were drowned in the Ohio River by the sinking of a ferryboat, rivermen are planning to revive a measure which was once defeated in Congress. The bill provides a better safeguarding of vessels such as the little yawl which carried the returning workmen to their deaths. Capt. James A. Henderson is leading the movement to have the bill presented. It would require that all gasoline launches which carry passengers for hire be licensed and inspected regularly, the same as steam vessels. It would also limit the number of passengers to be carried. The bill met its defeat on the other occasion through the powerful lobbying of yacht club members and big oil concerns having gasoline for sale. Action likely will be taken at the next session of the National Board of Steam Navigation, of which Capt. Henderson is a member. The stages in the local rivers have fallen lower than they have been at any time in two months. Dams Island to-night the gauge showed 6.3 feet and at Freeport 6.5 feet.

CONE APPOINTED.

MADE CHIEF OF NAVY BUREAU OF STEAM ENGINEERING.

Line Officer Named By Secretary Meyer To Succeed Rear Admiral Barton.

Washington, May 14.—Secretary Meyer to-day announced the appointment of Lieut. Commander Hutch I. Cone to be chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering and Engineer in Chief of the Navy, to fill the place made vacant by the retirement of Rear Admiral John K. Barton, which had been temporarily filled by Washington L. Capps, chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair.

Commander Cone was formerly of the Engineer Corps, which was merged into the line of the Navy years ago by the operation of the personnel law. His appointment is gratifying to the line, which looked with disfavor on the designation of Admiral Capps, a staff officer, as the acting head of the bureau, and which had viewed with dissatisfaction the increased power given to staff officers, particularly at navy yards under the Newberry reorganization plan.

Secretary Meyer selected Commander Cone for the position of Chief of the Bureau shortly after March 4, when it became apparent there was opposition in Congress to the Newberry plan of merging the bureaus of steam engineering and construction and it became desirable to appoint an officer at the head of the engineering bureau. After Mr. Cone's nomination had been made out it was held in abeyance, but yesterday's opinion of the Attorney General declaring the position of Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineers vacant as a result of Admiral Barton's retirement for disability, cleared the way for the appointment.

Commander Cone is a native of New York and was appointed to the Navy from Florida. He commanded the torpedo flotilla, which made the long voyage around South America at the same time the Atlantic battleship fleet was on its trip around the world. When his flotilla reached San Francisco Commander Cone was made chief engineer of the Atlantic fleet, and accompanied it from San Francisco to Hampton Roads. He has been on special duty recently in the Bureau of Navigation here.

HOTEL MEN, ATTENTION.

We have for sale the best summer hotel property in this section. It is conveniently located and has an established clientage in Louisville, Evansville and St. Louis. Season extends from June 1 to Sept. 15. The hotel and grounds are in first-class condition and the present capacity of 150 persons is filled each season without advertising. If an additional building was put up the number of guests could be easily doubled. This will bear closest investigation. It will require $15,000 cash to handle this, but the returns to justify the investment can be shown.

Patriot, Hallack and Deacon Score Clever Victories In An Ordinary Card At Churchill Downs.

OUTSIDERS TAKE THE OTHER THREE EVENTS.

IRFANEH QUITS NEAR THE END.

Nine Good Platers Are Carded To Start In the Frank Fehr Stakes To-day.

LIVELY CHAT OF THE TURF.

SELECTIONS FOR TO-DAY.

FIRST RACE—Madman, Marbles, Merrick.
SECOND RACE—Eva Tanguay, Gilpy, Brunhilde.
THIRD RACE—Hanbridge, Olambala, Dr. Barkley.
FOURTH RACE—Baker & Lewis Entry, Dainty Dame, Royal Tourist.
FIFTH RACE—Henderson, Relluf, Calash.
SIXTH RACE—Third Rail, The Peer, Cymbal.

THE second week of the race meeting at Churchill Downs will come to a close this afternoon, after six days of sport that in some respects has been remarkable. The feature to-day will be the Frank Fehr Stakes, a selling sweepstakes for 3-year-olds and upward, in which a high-class field of platers will measure strides. This race ought to round up the week with another broken track record for a mile, a mark that is held by King's Daughter, 1:38 4-5, made on May 25, 1908.

The crowd in attendance at the Downs yesterday to witness the running of the card was only of ordinary proportions and consisted mostly of what, in turf parlance, is termed "the regulars." The programme, which in most events favored owners with the cheaper grade of thoroughbreds, produced some lively contests, however, and the speculation was of a fairly brisk nature. There was no "jam" in the ring at any time and those who desired to wager on their selections had ample time in which to make their investments. The weather and track conditions were of the best and could be asked for, but the thoroughbreds engaged were not responsible for the breaking of any more records.

Favorites and outsiders divided the card, three of the former coming to the wire in front of their respective fields, and the crowd wended its way homeward after the closing event with about an even break. The most stirring finish of the day occurred in the third event, when Melissa and Right Easy came down the judge's stand heads apart and both under a hard drive. Irfaneh was made a top-heavy choice in this seven-furlong dash, but after scattering her backers up by taking a long lead in the early stages of the race died away and finished outside of the money.

Patriot Takes the Opener.

Sixteen selling platers went to the post in the first race, at three-quarters. All of them had performed with the exception of Lillian Ray, Jack Baker and Pinhooker. The public had had a line on the rest. Patriot, having Powers in the saddle, went to the post the top-heavy choice. Project, by reason of a previous good race, in which he showed some speed, was next in demand. The rest of the aggregation were lukewarmly supported, but the betting on the field was heavy enough to cause a good price to be paid on the chances of the favorite, Patriot. The field was hard to get lined up, and there were numerous breaks, in which Rupicola and Turley were responsible. It took the starter five minutes to get the field away, and the start was of the straggling kind, Turley showing the way for a part of the journey. Project was in close pursuit, and the favorite was back in the bunch. When the far turn was reached a spread in the field occurred, and Powers, taking advantage of it rushed the favorite to the front and assumed the lead, which he held until the finish. Zegla had no contention for the place. Glasner brought Irrigator up with a rush at the finish and took the short end of the purse.

Pat Dunne's Salian Wins.

A selling race for 2-year-olds, in which the youngsters were asked to go a distance of five furlongs, which was farther by half a furlong than the previous races for 2-year-olds, was second on the card. Seven started, and Jack Straw was most fancied by the talent and he was accorded heavy support. Just before the saddling bell rang the smart play came in from the paddock, and to a man they settled on Chanticlor as the one to trim the favorite. Pat Dunne's Salian went to the post the third choice. Simonette was well thought of by the Lexington contingent and was also well played for the short end of the purse.

Salian was a wild horse at the post and E. Martin, his jockey, had a hard time keeping the Dunne horse under restraint until the barrier went up. At the start Salian went to the front, but was taken back into the bunch when Martin took a hold on him. At the first turn Chanticlor went to the front and carried the field along at a merry place, closely followed by Jack Straw. At the turn for home Jack Straw easily took command, and was apparently running easy, when Martin let out a wrap on Salain and the Sir Dixon colt went to the front, and easily racing the pacemakers into defeat, drew away in the final run, and after a sharp brush outgamed Chanticlor and got the first place by a narrow margin, while Simonette, which was coming great guns at the finish, came in third, a head in front of Jack Straw.

Irfaneh Finishes In Ruck.

Ten 3-year-old fillies battled for a purse of $400 in the third race, at seven furlongs. Irfaneh was the good thing of the form players and they went to her with a vim. Melissa and Righteasy divided the honors for the second play. The play on the others was indifferent. Alice George was on her bad behavior and delayed the start, and Righteasy was also hard to manage at the barrier. With patience they were off to a start that was none too good, with Righteasy in front and Melissa in close attendance to the first turn, when the Fitzgerald trick took the lead and alternated with Righteasy to the head of the stretch. After they straightened out for the final run the first two hooked up and it was a battle between them for first honors, Page, on Melissa, getting the decision by a head, while Righteasy finished four lengths in front of Floreal. The favorite, Irfaneh, had enough after going three-quarters and gave up the chase, and finished in the ruck.

Deacon Wins His Race.

The fourth race, at a mile and a sixteenth, saw fifteen of the selling variety go to the post. The Deacon was the hot tip and he made good in an easy manner. Bannock Bob and Red Hussar were the pacemakers throughout the race and when the turn for home was reached they gave it up. Deacon then shot out of the bunch and easily disposed of those in front and went under the wire a winner by a good margin. Sempro, which laid in keen contention throughout the race, closed with a rush in the final strides and held the second place safe. Imboden avoided the early pace and was well ridden by Kennedy, came with a rattle at the end and took the third place in the closing strides.

Hallack Leads All the Way.

The fifth race for 2-year-old maidens was the medium of the heaviest play of the afternoon. The race contained many bottled-up good things and every starter had many supporters. When the field went to the post Woodford & Fizer's good gelding Hallack had the call in the betting and justified the confidence placed in him by romping home an easy winner. Forez, with Powers aboard, was considered the one likely to take the measure of the favorite. The others were also well played, the speculators taking a chance of the defeat of the favorite and landing on the long-priced horse. Hallack was on his toes when the barrier was sprung for the start and Kennedy lost no time in rushing him into a commanding lead and at the turn for home he took a good hold on the favorite and at the finish was only galloping. Starport and John McClure showed the most speed of the others and raced well until the field turned for home, when McClure gave up the chase. Forez easily disposed of Starport in the final run and secured the second place. Starport held on long enough to save third position.

Another Longshot First.

The talent suffered the severest blow of the day when Mamie Algol, one of the outsiders in the betting, took the last race of the day at a mile and a sixteenth from a shifty field of platers in which Gypsy King was conceded to be of the can't-lose variety. Hughes, Rustle and Ketchemike were the first to get away and the trio raced together to the head of the stretch, when Ketchemike had enough and gave up the chase. Gypsy King was in close attendance all the way and looked a certain winner at the sixteenth pole, when the Sorcerer gelding hung a trifle. Mamie Algol, which had laid off the early pace, began to close in on the leader, Gypsy King, a few yards from the wire, and raced him into defeat. The aged daughter of Algol went under the wire a winner by a narrow margin. Gypsy King was second, and Rustle, in a tight fit, took the third place. Hughes could not improve his position and finished fourth. Ketchemike quit badly in the final run and ran as if a trifle short.

NINE CARDED TO START IN FRANK FEHR STAKES.

For this afternoon's six events to be decided at Churchill Downs some of the best performers now quartered at the course will start. The Frank Fehr Selling Stakes, fourth on the card, is the feature. Besides, there is a handicap at one mile, a purse event and three selling affairs. Class is represented in each of the struggles, and there is little doubt but those who make the journey to the South Louisville course will be well repaid for their trip.

Nine have elected to go in the Frank Fehr Selling Stakes, once around the ring. Of these, Crystal Maid of the Baker & Lewis entry seems to have the honors attached to the favorite's position, and she, coupled with Aspirin, will likely be given preference by the talent. Dainty Dame, on her recent races, and in with light weight, will surely contend for part of the journey at least, and may be good enough to get to the wire in front. Royal Tourist, undoubtedly a horse of very high class, and which has not run his true race since coming to the Downs, looks to be a good wager for the short end of the purse. Sir Cleges, Huck and Woolsandals can be given a chance, especially if improved from their last efforts.

In the opening sprint, over the six-furlong route, Madman is selected to lead the bunch to the winning wire. This trick is one of the speediest performers at the track and will almost surely be in the front row if given a fair ride. Marbles and Merrick will be close up when the decision is rendered. Sixteen are scheduled to start here.

A four and one half furlong dash comes second on the card, and it is a hard proposition so far as selecting the winner is concerned. Eva Tanquay, however, looks a bit the best on form, with Gilpy and Brunhilde being the most favored for the place and show positions.

The third event is a handicap of one mile, and seven "real horses" are slated to make their appearance. Hanbridge, which has one win and one second to his credit in his last two starts, will be the one to furnish contention for the front honors. Olambala, which ran third to Hanbridge and Charlie Eastman on last Thursday, should show improvement, and is preferred for the place. Dr. Barkley appears good enough to "peep."

Seven 2-year-olds are elected in the fifth, at four and a half furlongs, and Henderson looks best of the bunch. Relief, which has performed creditably on two or three occasions recently, is chosen to be a contender, while Calash is favored for the show money.

The closing race of the day, which is the wind-up of the second week's racing at the Downs, has the sixteen limit billed to battle over one mile and a sixteenth. Third Rail, making his first start of the meeting, is given, on his California efforts, the honor of first choice. He may not be good enough after his let-up, but he will receive a heavy play at any rate. The Peer and Cymbal should be close up when the wire is reached, and are liked in the order named. The indexed entries follow:

CHAT OF THE COURSE.

The Trial Derby race, as arranged, to be decided at Churchill Downs on next Wednesday, May 19, is one of much merit, and a fine field of the best 3-year-olds in the West will line up before Starter Holtman on that occasion. The intention of Secretary Davis in carding this attractive event is to furnish as nearly as possible line on the probable winner of the coming Latonia Derby. The conditions attached to the Derby trial are such that the colts which have already demonstrated their ability as winners of purses in their 3-year-old form will be required to shoulder a penalty of some sort over the stipulated weight, assignment of 110 pounds. Wintergreen, Miami, Warfield, Crystal Maid and Jeff Bernstein, should they start, will incur a penalty, but this will serve only to bring the field as closely together as possible from the standpoint of a handicap. The race as it stands at present, will undoubtedly prove one of the best decided at the Downs during the present meeting. The route of one mile and a sixteenth will permit of each starter having a fair chance to win, whether gifted with an extreme amount of early speed or able, after following a stiff pace, to come from behind. In all probability the field will be composed of at least ten starters, and it is safe to say the speculation on the contest will surpass that made on any individual even, with the exception of the Derby, during the entire meeting. There has been a rumor the past few days that Jeff Bernstein would not be a starter on account of lameness, but his owner, Mr. Baker, has not confirmed it. Even should the Baker colt decline the issue, the balance of the material is of the highest class in the 3-year-old division, and the race is sure to prove an attraction worth going many miles to see.

* * *

The weather and track conditions were letter-perfect for racing at Churchill Downs yesterday afternoon, but as the card did not suggest the possibility of any records being broken, the attendance was confined mostly to the regulars.

* * *

Hallack, winner of the fifth event, ran a splendid race under nice handling by Jockey Kennedy, and this nice-looking Ben Brush youngster will very likely pay his feed bill in the Fizer barn.

* * *

Jockey Jimmy Lee wore a look of determination on his face when at the post on Deacon in the fourth race, which seemed to say that he would surely retaliate in case any of the other riders gave him the "rough rub." He plowed through the bunch to get a position with the Mueller candidate, after which he put up a fine ride, and landed Deacon a winner with daylight to spare.

* * *

Mamie Algol showed a return to her old-time form in winning the closing event, and the long-distance performers will from now on have to "sit up and take notice" when Mamie is engaged with them over a long route. This one has been pulling a milk wagon lately.

* * *

Pat Dunne won his first race of the meeting with Salian.

* * *

Sinfran was one of the "hot" things in first race that failed to materialize. Tab this one though, for he is from a stable that sends winners to the post.

* * *

Jockey Heidel was fined $50 by Starter Holtman for breaking through the barrier with Ordono in sixth race.

* * *

Irfaneh gave the "cinch" bettors who play favorites to show an awful jolt for she failed to get in the money.

* * *

Melissa showed a flash of her eastern form when she beat a fair lot in the third.

* * *

Jockey Lee managed to evade the "rough riders" yesterday, winning on Deacon.

* * *

Roscoe Troxler has been doing a Marathon on the road of late in an effort to reduce his weight. He had the mount on Mamie Algol in sixth race and brought her home a handy winner.

* * *

Gypsy King seems to be the champion hard luck horse of the meeting. He runs consistently but can't deliver the goods.

* * *

Jockey Tommy Taylor lodged a claim of foul against Starport, which was not allowed. In the same race he was fined $50 for misbehavior at the post, $25 of which stood.

* * *

The public is beginning to show a great deal of interest in the gentleman's cup race, which will be run May 18 and many are anxious to know who is going to ride. A good many young men have made application to ride, and it is hoped the names of those chosen will be given out in a couple of days. Boys who have ridden before are likely to give way to new riders who have not tried for this glory.

* * *

Placing the numbers on the programme beside the name of the horse that corresponds with the number on the mutuel machine is quite an improvement and is a big help to the women in the grandstand.

* * *

Jack Straw, W. H. Fizer's 2-year-old, bled in the second race and this probably accounts for his failure to be closer up at the finish.

* * *

Young Wiesen, the well-known local plunger, was very busy yesterday figuring the freight rates on hams from Cincinnati and elsewhere. He says he will buy a car-load of hams with his winnings.

More Trotters For Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., May 14.—[Special.]—Gus Macy, the widely known trotting horse driver, is coming here with twelve light harness horses belonging to George H. Estabrook, the widely known merchant and sportsman of Denver, to prepare them at the Kentucky Horse Breeders' Association track for the campaign of this season on the Grand Circuit. It is not known exactly when Mr. Macy and his horses will arrive, but he has wired orders that the stalls be prepared for his string.

There are several stars in the Estabrook stable and they, together with their genial trainer, who is a native Kentuckian and a resident of Lexington, will be a welcome addition to the local training camp. At the top of the list is that game race mare, Spanish Queen, 2:07. This daughter of Onward Silver, 2:05¼, and Elfin, 2:27, by Wilkes Boy, 2:24½, is in truth the queen of the stake-winning race mares. She was bred by J. L. Druin, of Bardstown, from whom Mr. Estabrook purchased her in the spring of 1908 for $12,000. Mr. Macy took her out to Denver and prepared her for a most triumphant season. She started in sixteen races last year, won eight, was second in three, third in two and unplaced in three, making a total of $20,813.33 for her winnings. She won the M. and M. at Detroit, the Hotel Burdick Stake, $10,000, at Kalamazoo; the LaFayette Hotel Stake at Buffalo; the Empire Stake, $10,000, at Syracuse; the Buckeye Stake, $5,000 and $10,000 stake for 2:12 trotters at Columbus, and the Transylvania, $5,000, here.

Some of the others that Mr. Macy will bring here are The Limit, a sensational horse recently purchased in California for $10,000; Dorothy Axworthy, Fanny Lawson, Colorado, Denver and several 2-year-olds.

Good Games Scheduled In Saturday Afternoon League.

All the contests carded for the Saturday Afternoon League to-day give promise of being unusually well attended and sharply contested. The teams composing the six-club league circuit have struck their gait and are presenting to the followers of the local amateurs the best article of ball they have ever witnessed around the local lots. Chief interest centers in the game between the Fetter Printing Company and Y. M. C. A., at Hirsch Bros. Park, Twenty-sixth and Broadway. The association boys are in the lead with a clean string of victories, but in the heavy hitting printers they will strike the hardest proposition they have had to contend with this season. Joe Herold, the crack local third baseman, has been added to the Fetter line-up thus adding greatly to the strength of the printers' team. Gleaton and O'Neal will be the battery offering for Y. M. C. A. team and Coy and Devitt will oppose them.

At Butchertown Park Post-office and Vic Lorch will be the attraction. Post-office will go into the game with Big Chief Leathers, the star local twirler, in the box, with the husky Tom Marsh handling his delivery. This combination will in the opinion of Manager Moss prove too much for the jewelers. Capt. Stengle of the Vic Lorch team will present McBride, Wenzel or Brenner and Semple for battery service.

Portland fans will have the pleasure of seeing Sutcliffe's and Government Depot in action. The Jeffersonville lads are confident that they can find in the Sutcliffe players the means of breaking their losing streak. With Chapman, Herold or Love in the box, and C. Herold behind the bat, they are already counting on victory. Manager Newman, the leader of the sporting goods team, will depend on Stiltz, Welting and Overton to bring victory to the Sutcliffe team.

MEMORIAL MEETING OF THE FILSON CLUB TO-NIGHT.

The Filson Club was organized and began existence on May 15, 1884. It has therefore now reached the twenty-fifth year of its age and will hold a memorial meeting at 8 o'clock to-night in the library of Col. R. T. Durrett, in commemoration of the event. Exercises appropriate to the occasion will be had and each member present will have the opportunity to make a short speech touching the origin, progress, present status and future prospects of the club. This will be the last meeting of the club until after the summer vacation which ends with the coming October.

Patriot, well handled, moved up gradually after going a quarter, but had to go wide into the stretch, finished fast when straightened for final drive and came away the last sixteenth. Zeola, showing much speed, ran a good race and lasted well in the final drive. Irrigator was well up throughout. Mexican Girl came from a long way back the last half and finished going faster than leaders. Turley tired as if short. Jack Baker was right there most of the way.

104—SECOND RACE—Five furlongs; selling; purse $300; for 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; second and third same. Winner, P. Dunne's b. g., by Sir Dixon—Falaise. Trained by F. Hanlon. Value to winner, $225. Fractional time: :24, :48 1-5, 1:01.

Salian, running to his best form, followed close up from the start and, under hard urging, wore down Chanticlor in the last furlong, and won well in hand. Chanticlor, away fast, raced Jack Straw into defeat the first half, but tired near the end from his early effort. Simonette was gaining stoutly at the end and got up in the closing strides for third place. Jack Straw quit badly in the last furlong. Kiddy Lee, a slow beginner, could never get into serious contention and ran poorly.

105—THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs; purse $400; for 3-year-old fillies. Start bad. Won driving; second and third same. Winner, I. B. Fitzgerald's ch. f., by Star Shoot—Much Ado. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300. Fractional time: :23 4-5, :46 1-5, 1:13 1-5, 1:26.

Mutuels Paid—Hallack, straight, $13.85; place, $8.50; show, $6.55. Forez, place, $7.90; show, $6.60. Starport, show, $7.55.

Hallack ran as if much the best, was away forwardly, and, showing the most speed, held the others safe throughout and won with plenty in reserve. Forez began slowly and had to go wide in the first turn, but finished gamely and fast. Starport had no mishaps, was tiring, and barely lasted long enough for third place. McClure performed impressively. Capt. Glore closed up a good gap, ran greenly. Master Eugene was prominent for a quarted. Scratched: Fritz Polly and Gilpy.

108—SIXTH RACE—Purse $300, for 4-year-olds and up; one mile and a sixteenth; selling. Start good. Won driving; second and third same. Winner J. W. Tate's b. m., a., by Algol—Miss Mary. Trained by C. W. Hall. Value to winner $225. Fractional time :24 2-5; :49 4-5, 1:14 3-5; 1:40 2-5; 1:46 4-

BLUEGRASS LEAGUE.

Winchester 5, Shelbyville O.

Winchester, May 14.—(Special.)—Winchester defeated Shelbyville decisively in a game of baseball this afternoon. The visitors played a nice game, but they never had a chance to win. No scoring was done on either side until the seventh inning, when some good work on the part of the home boys netted four runs. They added another in the eighth inning, and with the exception of these two innings neither side was able to get a man across the plate. The game was remarkably free from kicking and the umpire's decisions were never questioned. The same teams play here again to-morrow. The batteries were Chapman and Horn for the home team and Vallandingham and Moffitt for the visitors. The score:

State Beats Berea College.

Lexington, Ky., May 14.—[Special.]—In a rather listless game this afternoon the State University baseball team defeated Berea College by a score of 7 to 2. For the first three innings Thornton, for Berea, held State safe, but in the fourth he let down and from there on State held a good lead. Berea seemed weak in team work, although its material is excellent. Score by innings:

PROMOTER LOSES SUIT AGAINST J. B. HAGGIN.

New York, May 14.—Athole B. Reader, a mining engineer whose wife Ella Rawles Reader, has been prominent as a promoter, to-day lost his suit for $250,000 against James B. Haggin, the horseman and mine owner. The suit was brought in the Supreme Court, alleging that Haggin had failed to pay a commission due Reader in connection with the purchase of Peruvian mining lands. Haggin denied he had made any agreement with Reader or that he had purchased the mining lands because of Reader's recommendation.

MILLERS WIN AN EASY VICTORY

Puttmann's Curves Are Hammered To All Parts of the Lot.

OLMSTEAD PITCHES IN FORM.

Larry Quinlan Rejoins the Colonels, But Is Not Yet Ready To Play Game.

JACK HALLA HAS BAD THUMB.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 14.—[Special.]—The Minneapolis team pounded Puttmann's offerings all over the lot this afternoon and shut the Colonels out by a score of 8 to 0. Olmstead pitched fine ball for the Millers. Twice he pitched himself out of tight holes. A couple of bad errors were made behind Olmstead, but they did not result in any runs for Louisville.

The Colonels started off nicely in the first inning and it looked as though they would score. Oyler fumbled Dunleavy's grounder and "Skeeter" reached first. Woodruff singled and Dunleavy went to second, the hit being a short one. Delehanty sacrificed, but Landreth and Tate struck out. Puttmann held the Millers safely until the fifth inning.

O'Neil, the first man up, beat out an infield hit to first. Gill forced O'Neil at second on an attempted sacrifice to Puttmann. Gill stole second and third bases. Quillen drew a base on balls and Block singled, scoring Gill and sending Quillen to third.

Block took second on a passed ball and Olmstead popped to Olson. Oyler hit to left field for two bases, scoring Quillen and Block. Wheeler noisted a single and Oyler counted. Wheeler stole second and came home on a single by Downs. Collins sent a fly to Landreth.

O'Neil hit a grounder to Sullivan in the sixth inning, but Tate muffed Sutor's throw and "Tip" was safe at the initial bag. Gill was hit by a pitched ball and went to first. Quillen drew a pass and the bases were crowded. Block grounded out, Sullivan to Tate, and O'Neil scored. Olmstead hit for a base, scoring Gill and Quillen. Oyler forced Gill at second, while Wheeler performed a similar trick to Oyler. Delehanty performed a double play, unassisted, in the seventh inning. Downs doubled in that round. Collins flied to Delehanty. O'Neil sent a fly to Delehanty. Downs started for home at the circle of the bat and failed to run to second base, tagged the bag and got away with a neat play. He was given a big ovation by the fans for his clever work.

Louisville had a good chance to score in the eighth inning. With two out, Delehanty singled and stole second. Landreth hit a short single and Delehanty went to third. Tate drove a long fly to centerfield, which O'Neil pulled down after a hard run.

Larry Quinlan rejoined the Louisville team to-day. He is still suffering from the effect of ptomaine poisoning which he got at Milwaukee. It will be several days before Quinlan will be able to take his position in the field.

Chivington to-day took Pitcher Halla to a physician. Halla sprained his thumb on his throwing hand in tagging out Jake Beckley in one of the games with Kansas City. The thumb has bothered Halla since. He was it in a bandage. The doctor says it will be several days before Halla will be able to work. The score:

TO CONSIDER

Plans of Chicago Sculptor For Clay Statue.

GLASGOW STUDENT AWARDED THE BENNETT MEDAL.

EIGHTH DISTRICT PUBLISHERS' LEAGUE MEETS.

COMPROMISE THE TAX SUIT.

Lexington, Ky., May 14.—[Special.]—The Henry Clay Statue Commission composed of Col. W. R. Milward, Judge J. D. Hunt and Capt. Charles D. Clay, of this city, after considering propositions from a number of sculptors for restoring the figure on top of the Clay monument in the Lexington cemetery, have decided to first consider the plans of Charles J. Mulligan, of Chicago. Mr. Mulligan, who is a well-known sculptor, will submit models for the approval of the committee. He will first prepare a model of small size and afterward one of the full size of the statue for the inspection of the committee and the public.

If these models are satisfactory it is proposed by the committee to engage Mr. Mulligan to do the work of completing the statue in permanent form and putting it in place, the work to be done to the satisfaction of the committee or such competent persons as may be selected by them. The committee are thus inclined, from the best information and advice they have, to select as the material for the statue the best quality of Bedford oolithic stone, which, under the circumstances, they believe to be the best adapted for the purposes intended.

The Henry Clay monument, which is perhaps the loftiest memorial shaft in Kentucky, and contains in its basement the sarcophagus of the "Great Commoner" and also that of his wife, was erected in 1856. The life-size statue on the summit of the monument was wrecked by lightning during a severe thunderstorm on the night of July 22, 1903, and since then the statue has remained headless. The last Legislature appropriated $10,000 to repair the monument and Gov. Willson appointed Messrs. Milward, Hunt and Clay as a commission to have charge of the work.

Will Change Positions.

President George P. Simmons, of the Madison Female Institute at Richmond, will, at the end of the commencement exercises at Madison Institute, next Wednesday, resign his position as head of that institution to become associate president of Campbell-Hagerman Female College in this city. Prof. Simmons will at once move his family to this city to take up his new duties. The reason for the calling of an associate president is that the work has been very heavy upon President B. C. Hagerman during the last year and with plans he has matured to put the school on even a broader basis, he will need help.

President Hagerman will leave immediately after commencement for Europe, where he will travel extensively during the summer months. In his absence Prof. Simmons will be in charge.

Glasgow Student Awarded Medal.

At the chapel exercises of Kentucky State University this morning, President James K. Patterson announced that E. L. Harrison, of Glasgow, Ky., had been awarded the Bennett medal as the student who had written the best essay upon the subject of the "Growth and Development of Constitutional Government." Mr. Harrison is a senior student in the College of Arts and Science, and stands high in all his classes. The medal, which was awarded to him to-day, is purchased by the annual interest from a sum of money left by philanthropist named Bennett to the Hon. William Jennings Bryan as trustee, which he was to distribute among twenty-five of the leading universities of the country and the interest on it be given annually to the student at each of these universities who presents the best essay on either of the two subjects, "The Growth and Development of Constitutional Government," or "The Foundation Upon Which Parliamentary Institutions Rest."

Publishers' League Meets.

A meeting of the Eighth District Publishers' League was held here today to discuss the plans for the convention of Kentucky editors to be held at Estill Springs for June 29 to July 1. Arrangements will be made to have trains make the proper connections so that delegates will not suffer the delay which has been one of the objections heretofore to the meetings at Estill.

It was announced at the meeting today that Mrs. Desha Breckinridge, of this city, had been added to the programme as one of the speakers at the convention and that she will deliver an address one afternoon during the session. Among those who attended the meeting to-day were:

D. M. Hutton, Harrodsburg Herald; A. D. Miller, Richmond Climax; Ed Shinnick, Shelbyville Record; William Woods, Anderson News;; T. H. Nichols, Richmond Register; W. G. Wood, Lawrenceburg News; Louis Landrum, Richmond Climax; Harry McCarty, Jessamine Journal, Nicholasville; J. B. Stears, Nicholasville News; F. S. Hughes, Lancaster Record; W. V. Richardson, Danville Advocate; Timothy Needham, of Williamstown, State president of the Press Association, was present as a guest of the editors.

Reach a Compromise.

At the meeting of the City Council last night a compromise was reached in the controversy between the city and the School Board by which the city agreed to give 3 cents more in the tax levy to the appropriation for schools. In compliance with this agreement an ordinance increasing the city tax rate from $1.70 to $1.73 was passed by both boards of the council and signed by the Mayor last night. By request of the representatives of both the city and the School Board the fact of the ordinance having been passed by the council and signed by the Mayor was not made public until this afternoon, when it was given official publication, the request being based on the fear that a number of members of the Citizens' League, who have intervened in the case in order ostensibly to prevent a raise in the tax rate, might secure an injunction to prevent official publication of the ordinance and thus delay the settlement.

Lexington Notes.

For the second time, Miss Annie May Field scored the highest number of points at the annual athletic meet at Sayre College yesterday afternoon. In the high jump Miss Field equaled the record set by herself last year, four feet and five inches. In the baseball throw she broke the record which she made last year, throwing the ball 127 feet, 5 inches. She established a record for the college last year when she threw the ball 122 feet 5 inches. Miss Field was awarded the silver cup as first prize, she winning by two points over the other competitors. Miss Lillian Lisle was second and Misses Isabel Field and Grace Jochum tied for third place.

SHAFT TO HERO.

Unveiling of Monument To Gen Lloyd Tilghman

WILL TAKE PLACE AT PADUCAH THIS AFTERNOON.

FOUGHT VALIANTLY FOR CAUSE OF THE SOUTH.

Paducah, Ky., May 14.—All is in readiness for the unveiling of the Confederate monument, surmounted by a bronze statue of Gen. Lloyd Tilghman, to-morrow afternoon. The ceremonies begin at 3 o'clock. There will be a parade of city officials, the local chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy, James T. Walbert Camp of Confederate Veterans and citizens in vehicles.

The principal address will be delivered by Hon. William T. Ellis, of Owensboro, Ky. There also will be addresses by Hon. Charles K. Wheeler, of Paducah, and Capt. W. J. Stone, of Kuttawa.

Tilghman Party Arrives.

The Tilghman party, composed of Frederick Tilghman, Slidell Tilghman, their families and several friends, arrived last night from New York in a private car. Mrs. Isaac S. Lloyd, of New York, who could not attend, sent a handsome wreath of flowers, which were shipped from Louisville. Invitations have been sent all over the South and many visitors are expected. H. H. Kitson, who designed the figure, arrived with the Tilghman party.

Of heroic size, nine feet high and cast in bronze, it represents the General in field uniform, in top boots, leather gauntlets, with field glasses slung across his shoulder. The right hand is supported by the belt, while the other, holding his slouched hat, is drawn close up to the body and rests on the sword. The left foot is slightly advanced.

Hero In Confederate Army.

Gen. Tilghman was one of the great heroes of the Confederate army. He was one of the descendants of one of the best-known families in Maryland, and followed the profession of railroad engineering at Paducah when the war broke out. He was the commander of Fort Henry when it was attacked jointly by Gen. Grant's army of 27,000 men and Commodore Foote's fleet of seven gunboats.

Gen. Tilghman's little army consisted only of 3,000 men. Not wishing to sacrifice them, as defeat was certain, he ordered four-fifths of his troops to retreat to Fort Donaldson and with the remainder fought the invading army for hours. Later on he took part in the defense of Vicksburg as a Brigadier General of Loring's division, and lost his life by a cannon ball in one of the most violent encounters of the war, the battle of Champion Hills, May 15, 1863.

Fall Fatal To Confederate Veteran.

Shelbyville, Ky., May 14.—Col. Richard T. Cox, aged 72 years, one of the best known Confederate veterans and old-time politicians in Shelby county, died at 6:30 o'clock this morning, from the effects of a fall sustained yesterday morning, when he started to descend to the basement of his home and to walk after a heater. At the time his injuries were not regarded as serious, but later it developed that his skull was fractured, and he sank steadily until the end came. He is survived by his sister, Miss Kate Cowen, with whom he lived, and brother, Capt. R. A. Owen, of Port Gibson, Miss.

Will Decide On Acreage.

Owensboro, Ky., May 14.—J. W. Dunn, president of the Green River district of the American Society of Equity, has issued a call for a district meeting, to be held in this city May 18. The meeting has been called for the purpose of settling upon the acreage for this district. All of the counties of the district with the exception of Daviess, have decided upon the 10,000 hill proposition, but the farmers of this county seem to be divided and cannot reach an agreement.

Big Hemp Crop.

Lancaster, Ky., May 14.—[Special.]—T. B. Walker, of this place, has 185 acres within about two miles of the city that is sown in hemp and is reported as looking unusually fine. Messrs. B. F. Hudson and James House have crops on the same farm owned by Mr. Hudson and Dr. Elliott, making in all nearly 400 acres in process of cultivation.

This is said to be the largest hemp crop on one farm in Kentucky, and the land, having been in bluegrass for years, will yield a most abundant crop.

Everywhere in this city are people who are living in their present homes solely because the landlords or former owners used classified ads.

Distribution of Fund Proposed.

New York, May 14.—Distribution of the Peabody Educational Fund, which was to have been made to-day was postponed to June 8 and 9 when a meeting for the purpose will be held here. The fund will go to Southern colleges and schools and the Peabody Normal School for Teachers at Nashville, Tenn., is to be the chief beneficiary.

Lecture For Boys.

A lecture will be given on electricity and wireless telegraphy at the Highland Branch Library by Miss Pauline Witherspoon Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Miss Witherspoon will also experiment on wireles telegraphy. The lecture will be for boys only and any boy interested is invited to attend.

Outlook For the Future In Trade and Industry.

THE IRON AND STEEL MARKET SHOWS IMPROVEMENT.

RADICAL DECLINE IN STAPLE COTTON PRINTS.

ORDERS FOR SHOES LARGER.

New York, May 14.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade to-morrow will say:

Further significant improvements have been made in iron and steel, and as they form a great basic trade this goes far toward establishing the long desired readjustment of the whole industrial situation. This and the better weather for both agricultural and mercantile interests are the week's most important trade developments. A marked optimistic feeling therefore prevails in most branches of business in spite of the fact that the unsettling tariff debate continues, not having yet reached its last stage—that of the conference committee.

The notable event of the week in cotton goods has been the reduction in staple prints, led by the leading producer. The declines proved to be more radical than anticipated, although opinions in the trade vary as to their probable duration. Print cloth yarn goods are not affected by this reduction, and prices remain fairly firm. Finished goods and bleached goods are moving slowly, jobbers being reluctant buyers, although cutters are doing more business on the latter line. Ginghams show a firmer tendency.

* * *

Inquiry For Export.

In the export field there has been some inquiry, but no actual transactions, sellers demanding more than buyers are willing to pay. In the woolen goods division advances continue in many lines, especially in worsteds. The yarn market is irregular, low prices bringing out some business, but is generally quiet, with prices strong in all lines.

The shoe trade is improved. Buyers in the Boston market have placed some fair-sized contracts and trade is expected to increase as shoe buyers are confronted with a rapidly advancing hide and leather market. Most manufacturers are firm in their views. Recent operations in Chicago packer hides have aggregated about 70,000 of all kinds. This business advanced prices still further, and an exceptionally high basis was reached in all varieties. Western country hides are also showing pronounced strength, while foreign dry hides have kept pace with the advances secured on domestic green salted stock. Trade in both sole and upper leather is satisfactory. Large New England manufacturers buying freely.

REPORTS IRREGULAR.

Bradstreet Finds Volume of Business Below Expectations.

New York, May 14.—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say: Irregularity still characterizes the trade, crop and industrial situation. In industrial lines the consensus of reports is that further improvement has been registered, especially in the iron and steel, coal, coke, woolen manufacturing and leather trades. Building is active, and lines of retail earnings are feeling beneficial effects. It is a between-seasons period in wholesale and jobbing distributive trade; orders from retailers are merely of a filling-in character and hardly equal to expectations.

The tone of opinion as to the outlook for fall trade is, as a whole, rather more optimistic, but the evidences of repression in trade, whether due to tariff or crop uncertainty, reduced purchasing power of the public or high prices for foodstuffs, are too evident to be ignored. Manufacturers of woolen goods are buying freely of raw material at Boston, and sales of new domestic clip wool to arrive have aggregated 10,000,000 pounds, while new prices are reported to have been advanced and this is reflected in large dealings in foreign wool.

Eastern shoe factories' orders on hand are below normal. Buying is not as broad as expected. Sole leather is active, supplies well controlled and prices firmer, with union sole one cent up. Upper leathers are also more active. Hides are firm.

A change in fashion is largely credited with helping woolen as opposed to worsted goods, but it is to be noticed that the latter branch is no less favorably situated.

Business Failures.

Failures in the United States for the week ending with May 13 were 224, against 214 last week, 231 in the like week of 1908, 184 in 1907, 161 in 1906 and 191 in 1905. Canadian failures for the week number 31, against 29 last week and 22 in the like week of 1908.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending May 13 aggregate 1,229,900 bushels, against 1,462,969 last week and 2,701,806 this week last year. For the forty-six weeks ending May 13 this year the exports are 155,225,529 bushels, against 183,075,973 in the corresponding period last year. Corn exports for the week are 131,241 bushels, against 268,734 last week and 102,270 in 1908. For the forty-six weeks ending May 13 corn exports are 28,684,169 bushels, against 44,457,953 last year.

BUSINESS OF THE BANKS.

Increase of 5.6 Per Cent. Shown In the Clearings At Louisville.

New York, May 14.—Bradstreet's bank clearings report for the week ended May 13 shows an aggregate of $3,197,504,000, as against $3,-965,878,000 last week and $2,470,494,000 in the corresponding week last year.

SUGAR AND RICE REVIEW.

New York, May 14.—The sugar market during the past week has developed both favorable and unfavorable features. In the latter category the brokers put the unsettlement caused by local independent refiners offering rebates of 10c a barrel to certain out of town points, which will move the big interests have yet to meet. Whether a fight will result remains to be seen. The atmosphere at present is decidedly charged, distributors declining to withhold. The established plan of wholesalers by orderly system of storing sugar at numerous so-called consignment points all over the country and substituting a few distributing centers has been revived by one leading refiner, but meeting opposition is temporarily in abeyance. Since it is estimated that the country still has two to three weeks' supply of refined sugar, no early resumption of active buking is awaited even at 4.75c net basis quoted in some circles, but the hot weather may change the situation. The raw sugar market is firm at 1-16c advance, with refiners buying for future needs, the general rains in Cuba being the stimulating factor. European advices are still rather unsatisfactory on beets. Refiners have now about seven weeks' meltings covered by the stock on hand, but will need all the supplies offered from the West Indies, to say nothing of some 200,000 tons of Javas. The margin between raw sugar and granulated is now 83 points, which is not a fairly satisfactory position.

While local dealers profess to feel cheerful over the outlook for the rice market during the remainder of the season, contending that increased industrial activity means greater consumption, the demand is still hand to mouth. Distributors are taking Honduras styles for their requirements are paying full prices for desirable grades, fancy heads being scarce. Japans, however, despite their comparative cheapness, are not moving so freely into consumption as had been expected, and local supplies are ample, causing some shading of values. Since the offerings from the South are not pressing jobbers do not intending that the increased industrial activity means greater consumption, the demand is still hand to mouth. Distributors are taking Honduras styles for their requirements are paying full prices for desirable grades, fancy heads being scarce. Japans, however, despite their comparative cheapness, are not moving so freely into consumption as had been expected, and local supplies are ample, causing some shading of values. Since the offerings from the South are not pressing jobbers do not intending to keep the market on an even keel during the summer months, especially since reports from the Southwest regarding the new crop have been favorable, the acreage being made large and the usual importations of foreign rice, but the shipments are not expected to be larger than last year.

Boston Wool.

Boston, May 14.—The Commercial Bulletin will say of the wool market Saturday:

"The market is very strong and active on both foreign and domestic wools. The former are selling steadily in moderate amounts, with nearly all grades of cross-breds and merinos moving. The West is about sold out. The shipments of wool from Boston to May 13, inclusive, were 98,224,306 pounds, against 51,-453,158 for the same time last year. The receipts to May 15, inclusive, were 123,649,491 pounds, against 49,985,807 the same period last year."

NIGHT RIDERS

SCRAPE SEVERAL PLANT BEDS IN CRITTENDEN COUNTY.

Cause Consternation By Destroying Prospects of Crop For Many Farmers.

Paducah, Ky., May 14.—Night riders have commenced their depredations in Crittenden county by scraping plant beds and there is no clew as to the guilty parties.

The plant beds visited were those on the farms of Charley Wring, Wes Grimes, Henry Grimes, James Simpkins, E. Howard, John Butler, Dave Brown and A. M. Long, farmers residing four miles east of Salem.

The beds were scraped and the canvass covering them destroyed.

Bloodhounds were secured from Morganfield and they took the trail, but failed to run down the depredators.

The plants destroyed were ready to set, and the farmers were preparing ground for that purpose. Their loss will be heavy. These farmers have been regular tobacco raisers, and have received no night rider warnings so far as known.

The affair is a mystery as they have not been involved in the tobacco war in any manner. This is the first time that particular community has been visited by night riders.

ONE ARREST MADE.

George Simpson Charged With Crime and Placed Under Bond.

Marion, Ky., May 14.—Almost every tobacco plant bed in the vicinity of New Salem, eight miles west of this city, has been destroyed by plant-bed scrapers. The farmers are very angry and excited. Deputy Sheriff Pickens and other officers went to the scene with bloodhounds brought from Henderson, and an extensive search after the marauders was set on foot.

As a result George Simpson was arrested and brought to this city charged with plant-bed scraping. He was placed under $1,000 bond to await the action of the grand jury.

ADLER CONVICTED.

FOUND GUILTY OF MISAPPLYING FUNDS OF BANK.

Trial Most Important Criminal Proceeding In Federal Court At New Orleans.

New Orleans, May 14.—The jury in the case of William Adler, president of the defunct State National Bank, who was charged in the United States Court here with misapplying the funds of the bank, to-day brought in a verdict of guilty. Sentence was deferred.

The case was given to the jury yesterday afternoon, but the jury did not enter into a consideration of it until after partaking of dinner last evening. The trial was concluded after twenty-four days of testimony and argument. It was the most notable criminal procedure in many years in the United States Court here.

Adler was indicted on seventy-two counts for alleged embezzlement, abstraction and misapplication of the funds of the State National in the amount of more than a half-million dollars. His alleged misdealings, flight to Honduras, attended by shipwreck, the subsequent liquidation of the bank, his indictment and final return to face trial, are chapters of an intensely sensational story.

One night during the latter part of December, 1907, Adler departed from New Orleans on the steamer Alps, which he had chartered and loaded with a large supply of groceries. He was at that time also president of a wholesale grocery firm here. The Alps crashed upon a reef off the Honduras coast but those on board succeeded in reaching shore in safety.

It was only a few days after Adler's flight that the State National Bank was forced into liquidation. After remaining in Honduras for almost a year, from which country it was stated he was supervising the operations of certain mines he owned in Nicaragua, Adler returned to New Orleans and surrendered.

His arrival here was in many ways unusual and striking. The wharf was crowded with friends, many of them among the most prominent citizens of New Orleans, who remained loyal to Adler, in spite of the bank-wrecking charge against him.

Adler was immediately arrested and released under bond of $10,000 pending his trial.

Held To Answer For Killing.

Albany, Ky., May 14.—The examining trial of Jesse Branham, who is charged with killing J. A. Tompkins, was held to answer to the Clinton Circuit Court. His bond was fixed at $1,000, which he gave.

DU PONT DAY OBSERVED IN FITTING MANNER.

Interesting Addresses Delivered At Manual Training High School By Leading Educators.

Students and teachers of the Manual Training High School held special exercises yesterday morning at 10 o'clock in memory of the founder of the school, A. V. du Pont. This is an annual event at the school, and is known at "du Pont day."

After the usual exercises were over, several of the students of the school delivered orations treating all phases of the subject of the day. All of these speeches were well prepared and delivered, and reflected much credit upon the boys who made them. Several vital points in regard to the Manual Training School were touched in these speeches. One of the speakers showed that the object of the school was not to give the students a trade, but merely to give them a knowledge of such things, in order that he may be familiar with them.

The speaker also showed how the training of the boy to be accurate in all things gives him the ability to reason soundly.

B. B. Huntoon, of the Kentucky Institution for the Blind, was the next speaker. He is one of the most prominent educators in the State. His remarks were brief, but he said several things which the students will do well to remember. He said that the idea of manual training was a new one when first taken up, and no one knew positively what would come of it. He stated that Mr. du Pont had given of his fortune freely and willingly, never fearing for an instant that it would be lost.

The students were much pleased with the remarks made by Mr. Huntoon, and were in sympathy with them because they knew that they came from the lips of a man who was in touch with such matters.

As an addition to the programme, Prof. Harvey, president of the National Education Association, gave a talk which proved to be very interesting to the students. He is one of the most distinguished educators in the country, and is particularly interested in manual training. He told of the manual training schools all over the country, and remarked on the advantage which a manual boy has over others. He reviewed the remarks made by the speaker who preceded him, and said they were all indorsed by him.

DAVID BAIRD PURCHASES A HANDSOME HOME.

Hughes Mansion, On Cherokee Drive, Becomes His Property For $20,000.

David Baird has purchased from Mrs. E. L. Hughes, through the Fidelity Trust Company, the old Hughes residence on Cherokee drive for $20,000. This is one of the handsomest residences in the Highlands, and is unique in construction. It was built by E. L. Hughes with a view to benefiting his health, as well as for every other convenience of a palatial home.

The odd appearance of the home, with its long line of stone steps, seventy-four in number, leading from the beautiful thoroughfare up to the portals, makes it a striking and attractive place. Mr. Baird, the purchaser, will soon move into it and will occupy it henceforth as his home. The stone stairway, without landing or balustrade, was built after instructions from Mr. Hughes, and is a pretty feature. Another feature is the "sun house," a half-exposed apartment, in which Mr. Hughes slept during his last days. It is one of the prettiest homes in the city.

Denied Also By J. W. Newman.

Secretary J. W. Newman, who has been making an effort to harmonize the differences of the American Saddle Horse Breeders' Association, when asked in regard to the recent publication in one of the papers that all differences had been adjusted, stated that the report was premature, was without foundation and was not an authorized statement from anyone in position to speak of the present status of affairs. He further stated that satisfactory progress is being made of adjustment of these difficulties out of court, and hoped it would be brought to a satisfactory conclusion within a short time.

Uncle Sam and Faust Spaghetti.
The United States Agricultural Department declares Spaghetti to be a highly nutritious food—rich in gluten and other strength-producing elements. These qualities are found at their best in Faust Spaghetti, a food that has no equal anywhere as regards tastiness, nutriment, and low price—a price which, when compared to that of meat and other food, seems insignificant in view of the great food value.
Faust Brand Spaghetti is a strictly American food. American grown and American made. Put up in clean packages, reaching you fresh and dainty, ready for immediate cooking.
Faust Spaghetti always delights because its adaptability prevents its becoming tiresome. To better understand its all-round cooking usefulness, get a five or ten cent package from almost any grocer, and write for book of Faust Spaghetti recipes—free on request.

"ICE KING" SUED.

Merchants' Co. Would Enjoin Him Out of Business.

CHARGE HE SEEKS REVENGE AGAINST FORMER EMPLOYER.

PLEAD CONTRACT OBLIGATING HIM TO KEEP OUT.

IN THE COURTS YESTERDAY.

In an effort to stop him from prosecuting his newly-established ice business and with the allegation that he is moved more by personal antagonism than by ordinary business motives, the Merchants' Ice and Cold Storage Company and the Merchants' Refrigerating Company yesterday filed suit against John Rohrman. The plaintiffs ask for an injunction to restrain the defendant from continuing in his business according to the terms of a contract which provided that he was to remain out of such a business for ten years from April 1, 1905. Gibson, Marshall & Gibson are attorneys for the plaintiffs.

The injunction is asked for on the grounds that when the National Ice and Cold Storage Company sold out on March 1, 1905, to the Merchants' Refrigerating Company, which had been incorporated for the purpose of taking over the ice plants and business in the city, he entered into a contract to abstain from the ice business for a period of ten years from the time the consolidated company should begin business.

The copy of the contract alleged to have been entered into with the defendant and which shows that $6,464.66 was paid for the National Company's plant and business, is embodied in the petition and sets forth that John Rohrman agreed to keep out of the ice business without first obtaining the consent of the plaintiffs, for ten years from April 1, 1905. It is set forth that the Merchants' Ice and Cold Storage Company was incorporated on January 6, 1906, for the benefit of the stockholders of the Merchants' Refrigerating Company and had conveyed to it all the real estate of the second named plaintiff. Rohrman, it is set forth, knew and approved of this transaction, and participated actively in the business until December 22 last.

Then, it is set forth, he "voluntarily quit" the service of the plaintiff and announced that he would begin business for himself, which he did by incorporating the Rohrman Ice Company in the month following. The petition refers to Rohrman having advertised himself as the "Ice King" of Louisville and to the fact that he fully knew and appreciated his worth to the plaintiff.

It is then set forth that in violation of his alleged contract he is now vigorously prosecuting the ice business, and that he "is now, and has been for some time past, actively soliciting, and in some instances securing the trade of the customers of the Merchants' Ice and Cold Storage Company; that by reason of his previous employment by plaintiff he is well acquainted with its customers and the details of its business, and is taking advantage of the information thus obtained to enable him more effectively to compete with and injure the Merchants' Ice and Cold Store Company in its business; that he is, and has been, reporting to all manner of illegitimate and unfair business methods by false representations and promises in order more to demoralize the ice business in Louisville and thereby injure the Merchants' Ice and Cold Storage Company in its ice business that is to build up a legitimate business for himself, his avowed purpose being to injure the Merchants' Ice and Cold Storage Company in order to gratify his personal revenge against it."

Report of the Grand Jury.

The grand jury yesterday returned the following indictments and adjourned until to-day:

Grand Larceny—John McGregory.
Housebreaking—James Creel.
Malicious Cutting—Garfield Finney.
Charges of converting property against William Jones and of detaining a woman against Henry Block were dismissed.

Suit To Collect Jewelry Bill.

T. Kirkpatick and Company, jewelers, with a shop at Fifth avenue and Thirty-third street in New York, yesterday filed suit against Samuel T. Castleman for $145, alleged due on account for a number of articles sold to the defendant on December 19, last. Greene & Tilford are attorneys for the plaintiff. Accompanying the suit as "Exhibit A." is a bill which is addressed to the defendant at the Pendennis Club, Louisville, Ky. It is itemized as follows:

Chatelaine	$20
Mirror	7
Memorandum Tablet	20
Corn Holder	29
Bonbon Box	19
Eyebrow Pen	19
Pencil	11
Engraving seven crests on chatelaines	20
Total	$145

Lighting Company Loses Case.

In the case of W. H. Johnson, administrator of Edward Raisor, against the Louisville Lighting Company in Judge Field's court, the jury yesterday afternoon found for the plaintiff in the sum of $4,000.

Raisor, a boy of 18 years and described as having lived all his life in the country, went to work on May 27, last in painting the roof of the lighting company's power house on Fourteenth street, between Broadway and Magazine street.

Part of his duties were to paint the wooden horses on which wires carrying heavy voltage were supported on the roofing of the building. In so doing he came in contact with one of the wires that was killed. The plaintiff charges that the wires were insufficiently insulated and that the decedent was not warned. The defense alleges contributory negligence.

The case went to trial Thursday and occupied all of yesterday. Johnson and J. Hleatt, and Scott & Hamilton are for the plaintiff.

Street-Car Conductor Sues.

The usual order was reversed in the suit in Judge O'Doherty's court yesterday, of W. L. Atherton against J. C. Fisher & Company. The plaintiff is a street-car conductor and the defendant company the owner of a wagon which is said to have run into the street car, throwing the conductor to the floor and injuring him. The accident occurred on October 19, last, and the plaintiff asked for $3,127.85 as damages, loss of wages and expenses. The defendant was represented by William McKee Duncan. The jury found for the defendant.

Seek Release By Habeas Corpus.

Alex C. Sherman, Joe Byrnes and Louis Martin, the three alleged suspects arrested by the police and fined in Police Court, were before Judge Gordon yesterday seeking release from custody on habeas corpus proceedings. The preliminary arguments were made and the cases passed until 9 o'clock this morning. Edward Lang, Joe Osborne and Frank Wolf, similarly held, also will be heard then.

Court Paragraphs.

—Ernest Hummel sued the Louisville Railway Company for $10,000 as damages for injuries he says he received on March 19, last when struck by a car at Fifteenth and Main streets.

—In the case of Mary Hunt against the Louisville Railway Company for $10,000 as damages, a jury in Judge O'Doherty's court yesterday found for the defendant, represented by Frank P. Straus and Howard B. Lee.

—Thirty-five cases of minor importance were on the docket of the Juvenile Court and were disposed of in a shorter session than usual by Judge Peter. One boy thought he ought to be allowed to swear at his mother.

—Charles Johnson sued Mattie Johnson and others, heirs of Benjamin Johnson, seeking to collect $300, alleged due on a note given by the decedent and asking for the sale of certain property and a settlement of the accounts of the estate.

—Another damage suit growing out of the sewer construction was filed by William A. Johnson, administrator of C. H. Parks against the Associated Engineering Company. The plaintiff asks for $25,000 for the death of Parks, who was killed at Bayly and Field avenues on April 23, when the walls of the sewer excavation fell upon him.

—By her will, dated May 6, 1902, and probated in the County Court, Mrs. Mary E. Robinson disposed of her property as follows: Half to her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Robinson Cecil and the other half to her two grandchildren, Mary Y. Allison and Lawrence A. Young. It is provided that the portion paid to Mary Y. Allison shall be held by her as her separate estate. A bequest of $250 is made to Josephine Henskle. Bennett H. Young is named as executor without bond.

Court of Appeals Decisions.

Baker et al., vs. Lane et al.—Filed May 4, 1909. (Not to be reported.) Appeal from Graves Circuit Court. Opinion of the court by Judge Carroll, reversing.

First—Estates—Fiduciary Relation to.—The general rule is that a person who occupies a fiduciary relation to an estate cannot purchase at his own sale, whether it be made privately or under a decree of court, and if he does he will be treated as holding the property for the beneficiaries. If the beneficiaries were of age, however, at the time of the sale and consented to it, these facts would work an estoppel, but the orders of the court are not in the transcript here, nor is there any evidence that the heirs consented to the sale of the land, and it cannot be said that they are estopped from asserting their interest in it.

Second—Rents.—If any improvements were made they were compensated for in rents.

Oliver, Shemwell & Reeder for appellant; James T. Webb, B. C. Seay for appellee.

HUMANE SOCIETY MAKES GOOD SHOWING IN APRIL.

The executive committee of the Kentucky Humane Society held its regular meeting yesterday afternoon at the Commercial Club. George G. Brown presided at the meeting. The report of the work for the month ending May 9 follows:

Twenty-three horses, three cows and one steer found in poor condition. The inspectors reported that twelve animals were found lame, twenty-eight were suffering from sores, four had fallen down; unshod horses, six. One dog was struck by a car and one by an automobile. One animal suffered from lockjaw. Fourteen wagons were overloaded. Thirty horses were lashed and two dogs neglected.

Disposition of cases was made as follows:

Ninety-nine lame, sore and ill-fed animals temporarily suspended from laborthree sent to the country; thirty-one put under care of veterinary; ten put to assist heavily-loaded teams; twenty-eight sent to blacksmiths; owners and drivers warned concerning the condition of fifty-three; four old, worn-out animals destroyed; pads and girthbands removed and harness adjusted for three; better feed ordered for nine; assisted in getting up, one.

Officers also examined 328 animals around dumps and building sites; twenty-five ponies at a dog and pony show, and 19,896 head of cattle, hogs and sheep at a stockyard and found all fed and watered and in good condition.

Hereafter the monthly meetings will be held in the Commercial Club rooms, Fourth avenue and Main street, instead of in the offices of the Louisville Banking Company, Fifth and Market streets.

KENTUCKY COUPLE SECRETLY MARRIED ACROSS RIVER.

A request was made yesterday that Curtis W. Ballard, Clerk of the Clark Circuit Court, announce that Albert W. Bennett, of Louisville, and Miss Lillie D. Carr, of Westport, Ky., were secretly married in Jeffersonville on March 2, by Magistrate James S. Kelgwin. Each is 24 years old and the bridegroom, who is a carpenter, was born at Lagrange, Ky., where his father, Joseph Bennett, is a farmer. The bride is a native of Westport and is a daughter of Russell Carr, who is a farmer near there.

AWFUL RASH ALL OVER BOY'S BODY
Weeping Eczema Kept Spreading on Little Sufferer—A Score of Treatments Prove Dismal Failures—Grateful Father Tells of CURE ACHIEVED BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"It gives me great pleasure to express my deep gratitude in appreciation of the incalculable benefit that the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent did my little boy. He had an awful rash all over his body and the doctor said it was eczema. It was terrible and used to water awfully. Any place the water went it would form another sore and it would become crusted. A score or more physicians failed utterly and dismally in their efforts to remove the trouble. Then I was told to use the Cuticura Remedies. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and before we had used half the Resolvent I could see a change in him. In about two months he was entirely well. When people see him now they ask, 'What did you get to cure your baby?' and all we can say is, 'It was the Cuticura Remedies.' So in us Cuticura will always have firm and warm friends. George F. Lambert, 139 West Centre St., Mahanoy City, Pa., September 26 and November 4, 1907."
MILLIONS OF PEOPLE

NEW PARISH HOUSE

TO BE DEDICATED TO-MORROW MORNING.

Erected By Congregation of Fourth-Avenue Presbyterian Church At Cost of $30,000.

Dedicatory exercises of the new parish house of the Fourth avenue Presbyterian Church will take place at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning. The new building, which is in the rear of the church, is built of Harvard brick and Bedford stone in front and the sides and rear are of concrete. At a cost of $30,000 the church has secured what is probably the most modernly appointed Sunday-school and parish house in the South.

In the basement a large auditorium is provided for banquets, boys' clubs, classes and other assemblages. A kitchen, serving room, lavatories and janitor's apartments are also provided. On the first floor the session room, women's parlor, finished in mahogany; junior department, and separate class-rooms are provided, the architecture being of the English-Gothic design, finished in oak. The windows contain the coats-of-arms of the Presbyterian church.

Dr. W. Francis Irwin, the pastor, has his study on the second floor, and the primary department and kindergarten are also on this floor. The church's building committee is composed of Admiral John C. Watson, chairman; Miss Anna Barr, J. H. Scales, F. W. Currey and Thomas McCulloch. Many gifts have been made by the members of the congregation to the new building.

The programme for the dedicatory service follows:

Organ Prelude—"Cantilena." (Stebbens).
The Doxology.
Invocation.
Anthem—"Except the Lord Build the House." (Gilchrist).
Responsive Reading—Led by Dr. W. Francis Irwin.
Anthem—"O How Amiable Are Thy Dwellings." (Barnaby).
Scripture Lesson—The Rev. Henry E. Dosker, D. D.
Hymn—"All Hail the Power."
Prayer—The Rev. Henry E. Dosker, D. D.
Response—(Choir)—"The Lord Is My Shepherd." (Mason).
Offertory — (Solo) — "Send Out Thy Light" (Gounod).
Prayer of Consecration.
Transference of keys of the Parish House by Admiral John C. Watson, chairman of the building committee, to J. H. Hundley, chairman of the board of deacons, acting for the congregation.
Act of Dedication.
Prayer of Dedication by Dr. Irwin.
Hymn No. 536—"The Church's One Foundation."
Sermon—"The Exhortation of Barnabas," by the pastor, Dr. W. Francis Irwin.
Prayer.
Hymn No. 85—"Ancient of Days."
Benediction.
Postlude—"Hallelujah Chorus." (Handel).

On Monday the congregation of the church will give a reception to their friends in other churches, showing them over the new parish house. Next Wednesday evening there will be a fellowship and consecration service, and on Thursday evening the choir will give a concert, presenting "Alice In Wonderland." The Men's Club announces a banquet for Wednesday evening, May 26, at 8:30 o'clock.

LOGAN C. MURRAY BACK FROM BANKERS' MEETING.

Logan C. Murray, of the American National Bank, returned yesterday from New York, Washington and Baltimore. Mr. Murray went to New York to attend the executive council of the American Bankers' Association, of which he is a past president. The council met at Briar Cliff-on-the-Hudson for the purpose of considering matters in connection with the next annual convention of the association. The date for the convention was fixed for September 13, 14 and 15, and will be held in Chicago.

Mr. Murray was accompanied on the trip by his two daughters, and he visited President Taft, who is a personal friend, while he was in Washington.

"I found President Taft busy and pleasant," said Mr. Murray, "and glad to see a Kentucky friend. I talked with some of the big boys in Congress, and I found them all on the alert about the tariff question. Every move made is watched carefully by both sides."

STILL LOOKING FOR AGED WOMAN'S ASSAILANT.

The police are still searching for the man who so brutally assaulted and robbed Mrs. Mary Menz at her home at 2221 Cedar street, but no one has been arrested charged directly with the offense. Detectives Rice and Young took into custody a suspect Thursday night at Twenty-second and Grayson streets. He is charged with loitering and the police are trying to work up a case against him, although he positively denies that he had any connection with the case.

The aged woman is still suffering from injuries she received. The people in the neighborhood are considerably wrought up over the assault.

THE ROTHCHILDS APARTMENT CHANGES HANDS.

The Rothchilds, an apartment house at the southeast corner of First and Bloom streets, was sold yesterday to the Columbia Trust Company. The consideration of transfer was $15,000 and residence property at Thirty-first and Chestnut streets, equivalent to $10,000, making the deal a $25,000 transaction. The apartment house is a six-flat building, three stories high.

NEW WHISKY HOUSE COMES TO LOUISVILLE.

Joseph Thompson, president of the Joseph Thompson Whisky Co., of Chattanooga, has leased the building at 125 Third street, through the Varble & Frazier Real Estate Co., for use as the headquarters for the company. The State-wide prohibition laws of Tennessee have driven the firm from that State. The firm, which is one of the most extensive in Tennessee, is capitalized at $500,000.

LITTLE MORE GRACE FOR SLOW TAXPAYERS.

Owing to the rush of legal work in the City Attorney's office, Tax Receiver McCulloch announced yesterday that delinquent taxpayers for 1907 and 1908 would be given a few more days grace. Suits were to have been filed to-morrow but other important work was ahead and the hunting up of addresses is no easy task. The suits will be filed on May 25.

TRANSFER TRUCKS

FROM EIGHTH STREET TO FIRE HEADQUARTERS.

Chief Tyson Plans Some Shifts That Will Improve Fire Protection.

Maj. Fillmore Tyson has outlined plans that will greatly augment the efficiency of the Louisville fire department. An addition is nearly completed at the headquarters building, Sixth and Jefferson streets, to accommodate another hook and ladder company, and it is the purpose of Chief Tyson to do away with hook and ladder company No. 1, now on Eighth street, by placing the equipment at headquarters.

The old-fashioned Hayes truck, now at headquarters, which is an eighty-five-foot truck, is to be rebuilt and a rapid-raising attachment added to it. When it is overhauled it will be returned to headquarters for use by the No. 1 company. The seventy-five-foot truck, equipped with the quick-raising device, now in service at the No. 1 house, will be transferred to No. 4 hook and ladder company, at Twenty-third and Jefferson streets. The fifty-foot aerial hook and ladder at No. 4 will be transferred to the combination engine and hook and ladder house on Southgate street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth, creating an additional hook and ladder company for the southwestern section of the city.

The doing away with the No. 1 hook and ladder company will abolish a landmark in the department. It has been located at that point—on Eighth street—for twenty-nine years. It was the first hook and ladder company organized under the paid department system, which was organized June 1, 1858.

It is Chief Tyson's purpose to get the best equipment in the department centrally located for the protection of the hotels, theaters and department stores. The changes are being made by order of the Board of Public Safety, after recommendations made by Chief Tyson some time ago. He says it will greatly add to the efficiency of the department.

The Benefits of Modern Plumbing.

One of the most generally approved ideas of modern plumbing is that of installing one-piece lavatories supplied with hot and cold running water in the sleeping apartments and dressing chambers of the individual members of the household.
The benefits derived from this arrangement will not only be found necessary to modern living, but also prove a source of convenience and comfort to the occupants.
